SWEARS EATON TOOK POISON WHEN WIFE WAS AWAY

FUGITIVE ON BOARD GUNBOAT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Secretary Bryan this afternoon cabled Consul Canada at Vera Cruz to inquire of General Felix Diaz, now on the American gunboat Wheeling, what he desires this government to do in connection with his safety.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Oct. 28.—The Constitutionalists have captured the outskirts of Monterey and are preparing for a final attack upon the city.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 28.—Official returns from one-third of all districts in the presidential election show that the ticket headed by Huerta and Blanquet was successful by an overwhelming majority.

VERA CRUZ, Oct. 28.—The wildest excitement prevailed here today when it became known that Felix Diaz had taken refuge aboard the United States Gunboat Wheeling. The general, who only forty-eight hours ago had severed his connection with the Huerta regime by resigning from the army, evaded the provisional President's secret service men and escaped to the protection of the United States flag during the night.

L. Blun, an American, who came from Havana with Diaz, was arrested by the Mexican authorities. The United States consul immediately protested against Blun's arrest, and it is possible that he will shortly be released. No charge has been made against him. Fear of assassination caused Diaz to flee.

"My life was in danger," he said. "Conditions are intolerable. I was warned that unless I escaped my political enemies would seek me out and kill me. Many of my most intimate friends have already been arrested. I have placed myself under the protection of the American flag and look to the American consul for aid."

Jose Sandoval and Cecilio Ocon, two supporters of Diaz, and Alexander Wilburn, an American newspaper man, were taken on board the Wheeling with Diaz.

DEMAND FOR RETURN OF DIAZ PROBABLY WOULD MEAN RUPTURE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—A new and startling complication in the Mexican situation was presented today by dispatches stating that Felix Diaz had taken refuge on the United States gunboat Wheeling at Vera Cruz.

It was officially admitted that any demand by General Huerta for the return of Diaz to Mexican soil or any attempt to take him by force would be the one thing needed to stretch the tension between the two countries to the breaking point. News of developments at Vera Cruz is anxiously awaited here.

Caroline White's Feathers Seized

"America Isn't a Free Country Any More,' Says Opera Singer.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Women passengers on the liner Kron Prinzessin Cecilie, which docked today, held an indignation meeting when the custom officers, acting under the provision of the new tariff law which prohibits the importation of aigrettes, ordered the feathers stripped from hats. The women finally surrendered.

"America isn't a free country any more. They ought to knock the Statue of Liberty from her pedestal," said Caroline White-Longone of Boston, an opera singer. She said that she had about $9,000 worth of the decorations in her trunk, but she was told she couldn't bring them in.

Liquor Men Active on Sheriff's Death

3,000 Gallons Already Delivered in Prohibition Portland.

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 28.—Hardly before the body of Sheriff Everett G. Scully, who died at Scarboro Beach on Monday from a heart attack, was cold, the men who have been identified with the illegal liquor traffic were wiring Portsmouth and Boston for thousands of gallons of liquor.

Today the first shipment arrived. More than 3,000 gallons are estimated to have been delivered here.

The purpose was not so much to supply the present demand as it was to plant the liquor to help supply the demand for the future.

At every place the crowds were large and enthusiastic. The President is due at Washington at 10:30 p. m.

RULING IS THAW VICTORY

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 28.—Harry K. Thaw today said: "I am delighted with the action of Governor Felker in granting me a week in which to meet the issues raised by W. T. Jerome's new indictment."

His counsel also expressed their satisfaction at winning the pitched battle against Jerome, their first clear victory since the escape from Matteawan.

Everyone here was amused today by former Governor Stone's borrowing from Conan Doyle, in which he referred to Jerome as "the Hound of the Baskervilles."

Even Jerome himself is reported to have smiled grimly when he heard it for the first time during the argument before Governor Felker.

The hearing in Rochester on the continuance of proceedings looking to the extradition of Harry Thaw from New Hampshire by the State of New York opened before Governor Felker in the Common Council Chamber of the Rochester City Hall.

The chamber was crowded to the doors. Among the spectators were dozens of women.

Shakes Hands With Thaw.

With Thaw appeared former Governor Stone of Pennsylvania, his chief counsel, Merrill Shurtleff, his chief New Hampshire attorney, and Sheriff H. A. Drew and officer C. D. Stevens, in whose custody he was.

W. T. Jerome, Thaw's "Nemesis," and Bernard L. Jacobs, Jerome's New Hampshire representative, appeared alone.

The Governor's face was still badly swollen as a result of his experiment with poison ivy, which requires a daily visit to his physician.

The hearing opened with the inquiry: "Has any one here lost a fountain pen?" No claimant to such an article appearing, Attorney Shurtleff set forth the reasons why a continuance was desired, including the securing of a copy of the new indictment, time to file further briefs and the argument of the question of good faith on Jerome's part.

Jerome's Scathing Speech.

Replying, Jerome delivered a scathing speech, in which fire and vitriol, venom and wholesale denunciation figured. He said:

"New Hampshire cannot afford to charge a sister State with bad faith. There is no precedent on which Governor Felker can permit the question of good faith to be argued, because good faith in such a case must be presumed.

"New York will not submit to the indignity of having her good faith questioned by a degenerate criminal.

"If the continuance is granted merely on [illegible] poor [illegible] argued, I will file my briefs and go back

FIND LOTHROP WAS SHORT IN HIS ACCOUNTS

William H. Lothrop, former treasurer of the Boston Theatre, who committed suicide by shooting himself in his office at the theatre last May, was short in his accounts, it was stated today.

Guy A. Ham, attorney for the New England Casualty Company, said the Boston Theatre Company was about to begin suit to force the bonding company to make good Lothrop's defalcations. Mr. Ham said:

A condition in Lothrop's bond was that there should be a weekly audit of his accounts. This was not done, for if his books had been audited weekly, the defalcation would have been speedily discovered.

The New England Casualty Company refuses to pay anything because the conditions of the bond were violated. The Boston Theatre Company is to bring suit to recover the amount of Lothrop's shortage, although no papers have yet been filed, and no court action has been begun.

It was not known today how great Lothrop's defalcations were.

Manager A. L. Levering, when seen at his office at the Boston Theatre today said:

"Yes, we have brought suit. Lothrop's accounts were audited regularly, and it was only his last week's receipts that he got away with. His friends tell me that he played the races, besides speculating in stocks."

She said the president of the company is Charles Eckels and the secretary is William Spitznas.

John M. C. Lothian, a "customer" of the Mason Company, testified that he came from his home in Winchester in March, 1913, to get a loan of $40.

He testified that he had to pay $57.08 in three months for the $40 loan.

Sullivan of No. 42 Trenton street, East Boston, passed through Trenton street today a laundry wagon driven by Bernard Lebofitz collided with the hearse, and a wheel of the horses was torn off. SINGLE POISON DOSE FOR ADMIRAL, SAYS MEDICAL EXPERT

Dr. Arthur Everett Austin of the Back Bay—testifying in the Plymouth death trial as a defence medical expert—immediately after Mrs. Jennie May Eaton had left the stand—declared today that the arsenic which killed Rear Admiral Eaton, in his opinion, was taken in a single dose on the Wednesday preceding his death.

It was this Wednesday—March 5—that the accused widow spent in Medford with her daughter June.

"POISON TAKEN IN SINGLE DOSE"

Dr. Austin said he believed the admiral died soon administered following [illegible] noon meal in the Assiniput home at which it.

Asked his opinion of the testimony of Professor Whitney and Dr. Hatch, the State experts, who contend that the poison was taken in more than one dose, Dr. Austin replied:

"I do not agree with them. I believe it was a single dose and only one."

May Call June to Stand.

Mrs. June Keyes, Mrs. Eaton's eldest daughter and who was questioned again and again in her mother's testimony today, may be called to testify for her mother, according to a rumor at Plymouth this afternoon. The lawyers refused to affirm or deny this report. June was originally called by the prosecution. District Attorney Barker later announced he was "through with her" and that if she testified at all it would be for the defence.

Mrs. Eaton today told of the attentions paid June in her girlhood by young admirers, and declared that the admiral was very anxious to have June live in the Assiniput home.

Mrs. Eaton walked briskly from the witness chair at 12:10, after testifying more than nine hours in cross-examination. She had been on the stand a total of more than sixteen hours.

The accused widow smiled brightly at her senior counsel, William A. Morse, and then seated herself beside him as prisoner before the bar. She seemed calm and thoroughly self-possessed and bandied up by a confidence that she had some victorious through her long ordeal on the stand.

GIRL FOUND UNCONSCIOUS IN MELROSE

A well dressed young girl was found unconscious on a piazza in Melrose Highlands, today, and is at the Melrose Hospital, unidentified. She has not regained consciousness.

She is twenty years old, five feet seven inches in height, weighs 115 pounds and is of fair complexion. She wore a mixed brown coat, Norfolk style, blue waist with a red V neck with two stars on the collar, red leather belt, black button shoes, black stockings, black dress skirt, blue and pink underskirt and a black beaver hat with a bow on the back. There was a man's handkerchief in the pocket of the coat.

The young woman was found on the piazza of the house occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Shaw. The discovery was made by Mrs. Shaw. Mrs. Shaw summoned her husband and together they carried the young woman into the house. Mrs. Shaw telephoned for the police and a physician.

Doctors Ralph R. Stratton and Albert E. Small worked over the woman for some time, but could not revive her. They ordered her to the Melrose Hospital, where she is still unconscious.

Dr. Stratton said:

"The girl was either in a fit or else she had been drugged. She had probably been on the piazza two hours."

The police have the reports of one missing girl. Miss Julia Guthrie, a fourteen-year-old girl, disappeared from her home in the fashionable Westmount suburb of Montreal and started, it is believed, for Boston.

Miss Guthrie's description may well tally with the unconscious girl in Melrose.

The police of the Hanover street station searched the Montreal express when it arrived at the North Station, today, for Miss Guthrie. The girl was not found on the train.

FOSS' TARGETS SEND BACK A BROADSIDE

"Perpetually and perniciously active" Mayor Fitzgerald had this to say to Governor Foss:

Look for explosions every day on Beacon Hill. The Old Boy has moved the Sturtevant Blower Works to the State House, and, like Marquand in the World's Series, he's blowing up.

"Brutal and Ignorant" Judge Thomas F. Riley said:

The only answer I have to make is "ha ha."

"Tremendously forceful" Martin Lomasney complacently had nothing to say. Mr. Lomasney is the least quoted man in public life in Massachusetts.

David I. Walsh said:

I have no comment to make this morning. I will answer at the right time and place if I deem it worthy of an answer.

Charles Sumner Bird's reply to Foss, suggestion that he withdraw was:

Say to Governor Foss that in my opinion he cannot get 40,000 votes. Therefore, I suggest that he withdraw and leave the field clear for the only real contest, viz.: the one between Mr. Walsh and myself.

Attorney-General Swift appeared for the commission. Attorney Nathan Matthews represented Mr. Bulkeley. Charles F. Choate appeared for the New Haven. There is a doubt as to whether Bulkeley's appeal will tie up the bond issue.

HUERTA PLANS NEW PLEA FOR RECOGNITION

ing the second division of the Asiatic fleet off Vera Cruz, today witnessed the Navy Department details of General Diaz's refuge on the Wheeling. His message read:

"At 7.30 p. m. Monday, American Consul Canada reported Mexican General Diaz and two friends were in the consulate and were given asylum. At 1 a. m. Tuesday Diaz and two friends with Williams, American newspaper correspondent, got on board Wheeling. All asked for protection. Will hold them, waiting instructions from Washington as to their disposition."

Secretary of State Bryan declined to discuss the Mexican situation because of the absence from the city of President Wilson.

HUERTA PREPARING ANOTHER APPEAL FOR U. S. RECOGNITION

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 28.—Having complied with the request of President Wilson, expressed through Special Envoy John Lind, that an election be held in Mexico, General Huerta is preparing to make another appeal to the United States to recognize his regime.

"It was learned today that Senor Mercado, the Foreign minister, is at work upon the draft of a note, although negotiations are in progress with European powers which may prevent its presentation. It is believed that if the Huerta government is able to secure a big loan it will not insist upon recognition by the United States, but will content itself with formal request for equality of relations.

Force Officers Out of Army.

The general apathy over the "official" presidential election continues, the people realizing in advance what Huerta's proclamation announcing the result will be.

Frederico Gamboa, until recently foreign minister and confidante of Huerta, has been called aide to the dictator in the guise of diplomatic work, but has marked Huerta's career ever since he entered the National Palace. Felix Diaz, who formerly enjoyed an equality of power and prestige with Huerta, is being forced from the stage and into private life.

General David de la Puente, the Liberal Progressive candidate for President, has been forced out of the army for opposing Huerta's policies. It is reported that General Blanquet, who is one of the most servile of Huerta's followers, has prepared a number of resignations which will be sent to the generals whom Huerta does not trust. These officers fear to be in the displeasure of the dictator by refusing to quit the army and are willing to place their signatures on the resignations.

General Huerta and his intimate advisers are now turning their attention to the coming session of Congress, which will be convened about November 20.

Await Action of Congress.

After declaring the balloting of Sunday "no election," Congress is expected to adopt a resolution of confidence in the regime of Huerta and ask him to remain in power until such time as another election can be held or until the country is sufficiently pacified for other constitutional steps to be taken.

It is also expected to pass a bill approving a loan for the increase of the army. While Huerta is playing the very shady game of Mexican politics with the hand of a master, he is not neglecting his campaign against rebels. Through some sort of secret agreement the Zapatista insurgents in the State of Morelos have ceased their activities, but the Constitutionalists in the North have extended their operations. Miguel Aldape, former Acting War Minister, has been put in command of 3,000 cavalry and will leave this week for the State of Durango to wage a campaign against the rebels there.

The commander of the German cruiser Hertha, which is at Vera Cruz, called at the National Palace today, accompanied by several of the officers, and paid his respects to President Huerta.

HUNT FOR MAN WHO KIDNAPED JULIA RYAN

With the finding today of Miss Julia Ryan, twenty-one, who has been missing from the home of her Marlspan employer since Sunday, in a Taunton lodging house, the police of that city and adjoining places searched for the man who took the girl from Boston.

Miss Ryan was unable to tell much about the man. The Taunton police heard today that a young girl was at a local hotel.

They sent officers there and found Miss Ryan in a room. It was said that she arrived there Sunday night with a young man who said that he would like to have a room for his sister. She was given one. The man went away saying that he would return in a day or so. He failed to return.

She told the police that while on her way to her sister, who works for Mrs. John T. Kennedy of No. 21 Waumbeck street, Roxbury, she lost her way. While wandering about she met the young man. Beyond this she fails to remember anything else.

Troops in Strike Zone of Colorado

Governor Orders Military to Quell Miners' Lawlessness.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 28.—Nineteen companies of infantry, three troops of cavalry and two batteries of artillery from the Colorado National Guard were today ordered into Huerfano and Las Animas counties by Governor E. Three other companies of infantry will arrive upon the field as soon as they can be marshalled and armed.

The summary action of Governor Ammons followed a series a futile conferences between representatives of the strikers and operators.

Governor Ammons issued a proclamation declaring the strike zone in a state of sedition after numerous reports of lawlessness had been made to him.

Rare Church Books of Morgan Shown

Exhibition of Illuminated Manuscripts and Liturgical Works.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—In the Avery Building of Columbia University is an exhibition of illuminated manuscripts and liturgical books gathered by the late J. Pierpont Morgan. So much collection of famous manuscripts has ever been shown.

The volume which attracts most attention is the office of the Virgin, bound in silver, by that famous artist Benvenuto Cellini, and illuminated by Gullio Clovio. It took the latter nine years to finish it.

The High Cost of Living Crazes Many

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 28.—The steadily increasing high cost of living threatens to compel Ohio to build more asylums to house its breadwinners who are worried into insanity through inability to "make both ends meet." Reports of the State Board of Administration to Governor Cox show that over 15 per cent of the 2,399 Ohioans whose mentality weakened last year suffered because of causes akin to financial trouble—overwork, worry and nervous exhaustion.

Thais Magrane Wins Her Suit for Divorce

FOSS DEMANDS PUBLIC INQUIRY AT WORCESTER

So dissatisfied was Governor Foss today with the star chamber inquiry of the State Insanity Board at Worcester that he at once demanded a public investigation. This demand was met with a prompt response from the board to the effect that the hearings at Worcester will be public hereafter. The Governor said:

I am very much opposed to these star chamber proceedings. The public has a right to know just what are the charges of alleged abuses preferred against the institution, and it is time that certain narrow-minded public officials realized this.

Much more can be accomplished in a matter of this sort if those investigating have the assistance and support of the press. And, anyway, the people pay for the support and maintenance of these institutions and it is certainly absurd to see these "high-minded" gentlemen attempting to keep the facts from the public.

It was declared to be practically certain today at the State House by one of the Governor's confidential advisers that he would initiate an executive investigation, under his personal direction, unless the Board of Insanity changed its tactics.

HITT AND BRIDE NOW ON SECRET HONEYMOON

Speeding somewhere over the Eastern part of the United States today in the luxurious private car "Gracehands," with the route kept as secret as possible, is a bridal couple whose marriage makes the American eagle just scream with glee.

The marriage which tickles that distinguished bird so happily was that of Miss Katherine Elkins of West Virginia and "Billy" Hitt of Washington.

The world knows how Katherine Elkins, wondrous fair and a great heiress, was courted warmly and gallantly by an American and by an Italian nobleman—the Duke of the Abruzzi.

The world knows how the Duke, first cousin of the King of Italy, a brave and courageous gentleman, admiral of the Italian navy and an explorer of renown, was willing to defy all the Italian royal family, noble customs, court etiquette and everything else, to make the American girl his wife.

"Billy" Hitt, son of the late Congressman Reynolds Hitt of Illinois, young, good looking and in every way eligible, was also willing to do anything a man might do to get the girl he loved. Above all, he was willing to wait if he had to. He wooed and waited and finally he won.

That's why the American Eagle is pleased with himself today, not that there is a thing to be held against the Duke of the Abruzzi, only it gratifies the Eagle to see the American win—and then it keeps the girl in this country, too, which is a good point.

Dr. Shaw Scores Militant Suffrage

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Dr. Anna Howard Shaw at the Women's Christian Temperance Union convention, in denouncing militancy, said: "In America we never will be militant. The American man is glad to receive us courteously, but he always votes us down. A foolish part of the American man is that he thinks we will stop before we get the vote."

Sure Indications of Lung Trouble

Among the indications of threatened Lung Trouble are a continued cough, fever and night sweats. A change of climate often helps, but it seems that something more is needed to stop the cough and sweats and arrest the progress of disease. Kendall's Alterative, after many years of use, is known to be most beneficial in bringing about relief, in many cases complete recoveries. Investigate this case:—

"Gentlemen: I had a terrible cough, night sweats and pimples on my tongue. A man who heard me coughing advised me to take your Alterative. I paid no attention to him for I got so bad the doctor said I should go to Wyoming. I did, and when I got there I steadily grew worse. Then I remembered what had been told me about your Alterative. I began taking it, with no faith whatever, but before I had taken three bottles I could eat anything. Fever and night-sweats stopped and for over a year I have been well and in better health than I ever was."

W. F. ROMAR

(Address upon request.)

Kendall's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be the most efficacious for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in rebuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Sold by leading druggists. Write the Kendall Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

FEARED GOSSIP OF NEIGHBORS IF SHE CALLED DOCTOR FOR ADMIRAL, SAYS MRS. EATON

WASTE OF ENERGY, TOO, DECLARES WITNESS IN EXPLAINING STORE INCIDENT.

the accused widow, according to a report at Plymouth today.

It was learned that Almstedt is to be brought here to face in the courtroom with the woman who directed him and who is now charged with helping her second husband, Rear Admiral Eaton. A sensation is expected in the case, a mystery in the case, and from reports that the circumstances of the missing woman had been discovered by the prosecution caused a sensation.

Mrs. Eaton heard the news last night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ralph Jones, on Theodore Roosevelt Lane.

Pathetic Story of Dorothy.

The accused widow told a pathetic story of Dorothy's love for Earl Almstedt, ex-Washington youth.

Mrs. Eaton was of her fear that when the accused, just given up, arraignment would be looking because of her testimony.

"No one must, if any, will care to call or visit her, as she is a long girl," declared Mrs. Eaton in a letter she wrote to her newspaper at one time. The Jones's still resets about the denial.

ADMIRAL'S WIDOW TELLS OF JUNE'S DREAD OF POISON

Mrs. Eaton took the stand at 9:05.

Q—Did you state to anyone that the admiral would not come to dinner? A—He would not say that to anyone. He was very anxious to have June in the house.

Q—After all June had said about him? A—I don't think she ever said very much about the admiral.

Q—Didn't she say something about poison in connection with the admiral? A—She was afraid of it.

Q—Then you think that what has been said about June's remarks concerning the admiral is largely untrue? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Do you remember your mother saying on the witness stand that you spoke to the admiral about his attitude toward June and of your regret at not having June in the house? A—No, sir. I do not remember hearing my mother testify to anything about that. I did think she said that June could not live with us.

Q—Do you think the admiral was fond of June? A—I think the admiral would have given a large sum of money to have June live with him.

Q—This was one of the sorrows of his life, then? A—No, sir. I don't put it that way, but it was a grief to him.

Q—Did you talk at any time to a Mr. Peachy, a real estate man, about the admiral, and did you call on him about 11 o'clock one day? A—Yes. I wanted him to drive me through the woods, as it was dark.

Q—Did you say to him that you would like to see the admiral any more? A—No, sir.

Q—Did you look on one time with a Mr. Nordstrom concerning the admiral? A—Yes, I thought of asking some one to study the admiral and find out his condition. I said that I wanted some one like Sherlock Holmes. He told me he would take the case for $200 down and that it would probably cost me from $1,200 to $1,400. I could not see my way to pay that.

Q—Did he say he would come for $50 down? A—Almost, and I told him I would let him know. I believe I dropped him a card and told him I had reconsidered the matter. He would see me know if I wanted him.

Q—When Miss Rooney went away from your house who told you the admiral was all right, didn't she? A—No, sir, she did not say that. And unless she did not know the admiral by he ran away from her, he ran out on the farm. She had no opportunity to study him. She had never had a case of this kind.

Q—The admiral disordered why she was there, did he not? You had a talk with the admiral and Miss Rooney, did you not? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Miss Rooney went away the next morning, didn't she? A—No, sir, she stayed for four or five days after that.

Q—Did you ever think of having your personal committed? A—No. I never had a dream of having the admiral put into an insane asylum. I did think of putting him in a hospital, where he would receive the best of care.

Q—When you lived in Weymouth, a young gentleman named Cates kept June company, did he not? A—They were merely child friends, that's all.

Q—He called on June, didn't he? A—Yes.

Q—Remember telling him you wished the admiral was dead? A—No. The young fellow was attentive to Dorothy and he loved to play checkers with her. One day he drank some whiskey. I think it was the first time he ever had it. And he probably told her this.

Q—Do you remember a lady named Barnes who stayed at your one while you were away? A—Yes.

Q—Was it the time the baby was born? A—Yes, I had to go to Washington.

Q—Do you remember writing a letter to Mrs. Barnes asking her to allow a young fellow named Almstedt to call on Dorothy? A—Yes. He was a bright young fellow, and I was willing to have him keep her company.

At this point District Attorney Barker produced a letter from Mrs. Eaton to Mrs. Barnes, which he read. It was in part as follows:

Washington, D. C.,
April 14, 1913.

Dear Hannah:

How is Dorothy, Hannah? There is a nice young boy who goes to school with Dorothy, and as I know you love your girls and see no harm in it, and I ask you to let him stay Saturday until 10:30 and then go to church with me Sunday morning. Now to a person who don't strictly understand this may seem silly, as Dorothy is so young. We have been the best of friends. Dorothy sees all he cares to and no more. If any will come to call or visit her, as she is a long girl, I am positive that she have this one little reasonableness and manner to carry with her throughout womanhood.

I don't intend that she shall be married from schoolday boyfriends. She is a good, sensitive child, so be good to her. I know you will, but am simply reminding you how few men marry home women now, so how can a girl to have it while it lasts. I do thank you so much for helping her with her bath, as I always she appreciates it, don't know just how long I may stay away, and I feel mother needs some one as well as Dorothy, but I feel that I must stay some time yet. Write me occasionally and let me know how everything is and how the admiral is. If you can say indefinitely and if Dorothy likes or has any sickness and how son and Bill are, and if she misses my days at school. I am so worried and I am fortunate in having you, as the admiral says you do everything to make him happy. I am yours truly,

(Signed) JENNIE.

Q—Did you believe Dorothy should have this young man call? A—Yes, I did, but I must confess a young girl's caring too much for my friends like that I was willing to let Dorothy have her little pleasure in her own life.

Q—You heard Hannah Barnes testify that she was at your house three months didn't you? A—Yes, I heard her, but it makes no difference what Hannah said, she was there three weeks.

Q—Did you not bring Dorothy home from Hannah Barnes' home? A—Yes, she was invited in July and I took her there one Sunday in August they came and she introduced me to her husband.

Accused Woman Smiles as She Ends 16-Hour Ordeal as Witness

Mrs. Eaton left the stand at 12:10 today, after an examination lasting more than sixteen hours.

She was on the stand all day Saturday in direct examination.

She was on the stand all day yesterday and more than three hours today in cross-examination.

She smiled as she walked from the witness chair. She seemed entirely reassured and self-possessed. She walked briskly and her manner was one of supreme confidence that she had "passed the test"—that she had come victorious from the long ordeal.

DIDN'T RECALL POISON WARNING TO THE GROCER

Q—The admiral had planned a trip to the Panama Canal, hadn't he? A—I don't think he had. I had planned a trip to the Panama Canal with him.

Q—Was going to the Panama Canal, wasn't he? A—Yes, and he said he was going to take me.

Q—You had a separate passoffice box from the admiral in Assiniut? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Why did you want a separate box? A—Well, the admiral was sometimes careless, and one time he dropped a bill and lost it and I thought I should have a special box.

Q—You had another reason for having a separate box, didn't you? A—No, sir. I simply wanted to be sure of getting my mail.

Q—Didn't you have an idea that the admiral might be able to harm you by handling the mail? You had a fear of poison, didn't you? A—Mr. Barker, that's quite absurd. I never had any such idea.

Q—Did you not want medicine sent to your own box so that the admiral could not handle it? A—I may have received some that way once.

Q—You had a separate box for a number of years, didn't you? A—Yes, sir.

Q—On Saturday before the Wednesday you left home did you not get a special delivery letter from June? A—No, sir, I did not.

Q—Would you think different about it if I showed to you a letter—

Mr. Morse—I object. This is unfair.

Judge Aiken—I think, Mr. Barker, you should change the form of your inquiry.

Tells of Bakeshop Incident.

Q—Did you and the admiral go to Rockland on the 16th, and if so, what happened there A—Nothing unusual. I did some shopping. The admiral went into a bakeshop to get some bread. I told him that bakeshop bread was not very nourishing.

Q—What did the admiral do in the bakeshop A—I stayed outside and I saw him bow and speak to a young woman inside.

Q—Did he speak of what happened there afterwards? A—He didn't say very much about it.

PAID LITTLE ATTENTION TO DOROTHY'S TESTIMONY

Q—When you got home, didn't you have a conversation over what occurred in Rockland? A—Oh, we may have talked five minutes about it—nothing important.

Q—You heard what Dorothy said on the stand, didn't you? A—I did not pay much attention to it.

Q—You didn't talk more to the admiral about what occurred in the bakeshop? A—No, sir.

Q—You went to the bakeshop later and saw this girl? A—No, sir, but I happened to meet her and I asked her if she knew of any nice, refined girl. I said I wanted a refined and pretty girl to stay at the house while I was away, so that she could go with Dorothy to the theatre and to parties.

Q—Don't you remember the young lady testifying in court that you asked for a young and pretty girl? A—Yes, sir, and I was shocked at the idea.

Q—Then you did not have the conversation with the young woman to which she testified ? A—I did say part of it, but not all. I said that I thought the admiral was lonesome and should have someone with him.

Q—At one time you planned to help out at a fete that was to occur the following week. Did the admiral say that he would go to help these people, as he had never done much for them?

Objects to Barker's Method.

Mr. Morse—I object to bringing in this personal conversation. You were very quick to stop me from anything of the sort while I was examining.

Q—You started out to June's on Wednesday morning? A—Yes, sir.

Q—You went up to the barn to bid the admiral goodbye? A—Yes, sir, he was unloading hay.

Q—What time did you arrive at June's? A—About twenty minutes of three.

Q—What time did June come in? A—About seven or seven-thirty.

Q—You had some talk about the admiral? A—Not very much.

Q—June spoke about the admiral? A—Oh, yes, sir. She simply said that if she hadn't known him as well she would have fallen in love with him.

Q—Later you had more talk about him? A—No, sir.

Q—Have you told us all you know about the talk you had with June that night? A—Yes.

Q—Now, didn't you say to June, "The admiral wants you put out of the way, and he wants Ralph Keyes put out of the way?"

Witness Hesitates.

Mrs. Eaton hesitated and District Attorney Barker shot the following questions at her:

"Then she did ask you if you didn't think it was his intention to have you put out of the way?"

Again Mrs. Eaton hesitated and before she could give an audible answer, the District Attorney added:

"And you understood from what she said that the admiral had in mind putting you out of the way?"

Mrs. Eaton—I can't say that I did.

Q.—You did say, "I'll go home and look after him? A.—Yes.

Q.—It did excite you somewhat? A. Not at all.

Q.—It didn't excite you in thinking the admiral might put you or Ralph out of the way?

Before an answer could be given, Mr. Morse objected, saying: "She didn't say that, Mr. Barker."

Mr. Barker resented interference, and Mr. Morse said:

"I think I have the right to protect my client."

District Attorney Barker then withdrew the question.

Q.—When you started from Medford, you were not delayed? A.—No.

Q.—Tell us how you came to Assiniput? A.—I came to Hingham on the train and to Rockland and to Assiniput on the electrics.

Had Supper with Admiral.

Q.—You did not stop at Hingham? A.—No.

Q.—When you arrived home, what did you do? A.—I had supper with Dorothy and the admiral, and then went to bed.

Q.—I suppose you got up in the morning and had breakfast—all of you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did the admiral eat? A.—No, he declined to eat any breakfast.

Q.—Did you have your dinner together—the admiral, your mother and yourself? A.—Yes.

Q.—What time did you have supper that night? A.—About 7 o'clock.

Q.—Did the admiral have to leave the table? A.—He put his napkin up to his mouth and went out.

ACCUSED WOMAN, RESUMING STAND TODAY, CONTRADICTS MORE STATE WITNESSES.

Q.—What next did he do? A.—He laid on a couch.

Q.—Do you remember having cold roast pork that night? A.—I do not remember, but I don't think we did.

Q.—Did you have tea or postum for supper? A.—No.

Q.—Are you sure? A.—Yes.

Q.—The admiral drank tea, didn't he? A.—I very rarely let the admiral have tea or postum for supper.

Q.—Isn't it a fact that he drank about four cups of tea about every night for supper? A. No, sir.

Q.—What did you have for supper? A.—A light lunch—chicken broth, wafers and cake.

Q.—Do you recall having a heavy dinner on Thursday night? A.—No.

Had to Leave Room.

Q.—You say the admiral was sick and had to run out of the room? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you remember the admiral saying:

Old Time Sores And Ulcers Healed

Old Wounds Often Bother Many Years After.

People who have been pestering and anointing an old sore for years and years marvel at the way it heals quickly after using S. S. S.

When you come to realize that the skin and the flesh bound to it are composed of a network of tiny blood vessels you solve the mystery.

There are wonderful medicinal properties in S. S. S. that follow the course of the blood stream just as naturally as the most nourishing food elements.

It is really a remarkable remedy. It contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of the most essential nutriments. And the wonderful success of this matchless blood purifier and tonic as essential to well-balanced health as are nutritious elements of meats, grains, fats, and sugars of our daily food.

Not only this, but if from the presence of some distributing poison there is a local or general interference of nutrition to cause boils, carbuncles, abscesses and kindred troubles, S. S. S. so directs the local cells that this poison is rejected and eliminated from their presence.

Then, too, S. S. S. has such exciting stimulation on these local cells as to promote their normal welfare and a proper relative resistance to each other.

SINGLE POISON DOSE IN EATON TRAGEDY, SAYS EXPERT

ing, "Dorothy, I've done your algebra for you." A—Yes.

Q—Didn't you tell Dorothy to go to bed early that night? A—I always wanted Dorothy to be healthy.

Q—Didn't you tell Dorothy that you would give her an hour in which to do her lessons and that she then must go to bed? A—I had certain rules about Dorothy.

Q—I did not ask you that, Mrs. Eaton. Will you say now that you did or did not tell Dorothy that she must study her lessons within an hour and then go to bed? A—I did not.

Q—Did you hear the general call on Thursday night? A—I never heard him at all on Thursday night. The sun woke me up in the morning.

Q—On Friday, did you take care of him all through the day? A—I did.

Q—You say you were busy in your bathroom; were you? A—Yes.

Q—What do you mean when you say you had six hot water bottles to take care of? A—Why, I had six hot-water bottles and I had to keep changing the water to keep them hot all day long.

Couldn't Eat Breakfast.

Q—Did he eat any breakfast on Friday morning? A—No.

Q—Did you coax him to eat breakfast. A—I tried to coax him to eat. I fixed up some toast with cream, but he could not eat it.

Q—Did you offer him any whiskey? A—I did not because I didn't have any.

Q—What did you do? A—I did everything in my power to make him comfortable; the bed was in the warmest room, let the fresh air in and kept him comfortable.

Q—Dr. Frame came that morning, didn't he? A—Yes.

Q—How did you tell the doctor the admiral felt? A—I told him he was in bed feeling very poorly and very sick.

Q—Did he leave any medicine? A—Yes, he gave me some rubber bags to put in every two hours.

Q—Did you give them to him? A—He could not keep them down, even in water. He would vomit as soon as he took a drink of water.

Q—Do you mean to say that he vomited before anything reached his stomach. A—Why, he vomited as fast as he tried to take a drink of water containing the pills. I tried to lift him up, but it distressed him to rise in bed.

Q—And so, Mrs. Eaton, he didn't get any medicine? A—I gave him two or three tablets only, and he couldn't keep them down.

Q—Didn't you try to give him some cold tea? A—No, I never gave him cold tea.

Q—Did you give him a little pinch of soda at one time? A—Yes, I gave him a little pinch of soda in a some water in a cup.

Q—Didn't you remember telling Mr. Scott that you gave soda a number of times? A—No, I don't.

Q—Did he visit you continually on Friday? A—I don't recall.

Q—Don't you remember telling John Scott that he didn't visit until Friday night? A—I might have said so. I don't remember.

Went to Bed Early Friday.

Q—You were up in his room more or less on Friday, weren't you? A—Yes, Friday was another day and I made it my business to be on that floor on account of being dad.

Q—What time did you go to bed on Friday night? A—About 8:30. Dorothy and I went up to the admiral's room.

Q—Did you talk with the admiral? A—Yes, Dorothy and I talked with him.

Q—What else did you do? A—I think she was entertaining him by cutting scrish towels around them so that they wouldn't scald him. Then we made him comfortable and went to bed.

DENIES THAT SHE TOLD DOROTHY TO GO TO BED

Q—What A—Dorothy and I.

Q—Weren't you in bed when Dorothy came in? A—No, I was not.

Q—Quite sure of that? A—Yes.

Q—Didn't you tell Dorothy to go to bed? A—No, I did not.

Q—Didn't you tell her you would give her an hour to get to bed? A—I don't remember. I might have.

Q—Didn't you tell Dorothy a little after 7 o'clock that night that she must go to bed in one hour, about 8 minutes past 8? A—I don't remember.

Found Admiral on Floor.

Q—Well, after you and Dorothy had gone to bed, about 2:15 the next morning you heard a call, didn't you? A—Yes.

Q—You found the admiral on the floor in his room, with his head against the bed? A—Yes.

Q—Was he unconscious? A—Sort of unconscious.

Q—And you put him in bed? A—Yes.

Q—Didn't you hear him ask for a doctor. A—I don't recall. He was muttering something; it might have been "doctor."

Q—You don't recall his asking for a doctor? A—No, the admiral did not ask for a doctor. If he had, I would have sent for one.

Q—Do you recall saying, "The doctor is coming in the morning. Joe. You'll be all right?" A—I can't say about that.

Q—What did you do first before going to bed? A—I got a warm cloth to cover him with and got on the bed.

Q—Did you go downstairs before retiring? A—No, sir, I just put the quilt over him and rolled myself well. Then I got into bed and put my arms around him for he was very cold. He said he felt very much better and he both went sound asleep.

Woke Up to Find Him Cold.

Q—What time did you wake up? A—I woke up about 4 o'clock and found him cold.

Q—Then what did you do? A—I jumped out of bed, ran to the window and then called to the admiral. I couldn't believe that he was dead. Then I went and told Dorothy that her father had died in the night.

Q—Were there any bottles about the bed? A—Yes, there were a number of bottles about the room, two of which Dr. Osgood had here in the court room.

Q—Did you tell Dorothy the evening before that you didn't want her to take any more bottles to her father? A—I did, because I didn't want Dorothy to could herself. I was afraid that she might, issue as she was.

Q—Were there other reasons why you didn't want Dorothy to take care of the admiral? A—I thought she was too young.

Not Angry with Dorothy.

Q—You said something to the effect about it in his room? A—I told him that the girl was not capable of doing this sort of nursing.

Q—You got angry about it? A—No, sir. I told Dorothy to go out and let me take care of the admiral and that I could do it very well.

Q—Did she go? A—Yes, sir, she went down on the piazza.

Q—Did you also go next down on the piazza? A—Yes, sir, I am sure of it.

Q—Was Dorothy doing? that you spoke about Dorothy going on sunday for to take care of the admiral? A—I don't have time to go in the bed.

Q—Do you remember telling Dorothy that the admiral was not able to go the bathroom that night and for her not to get to bed? A—No.

Q—You told Dorothy to go to bed early as the admiral could not do algebra? A—I do not admit saying that.

Q—Did you write on a piece of paper and hand it to Dorothy? A—Yes sir.

Q—When was it written? A—I should say about five or six weeks before the admiral died.

Q—Didn't you use the typewriter after the admiral passed away? A—No, sir.

Went With June to Chicago.

Q—Are you sure about that? A—Yes, sir.

Q—By the way, Mrs. Eaton, you spoke of June being in Chicago when you went on to visit? A—I never went to Chicago when June was there, but I went with him.

Q—Don't you remember saying that June was there and that she asked you to come on to meet a young man of whom she was very fond? A—No, sir, she was in Chicago all the time.

Q—What year was it that you made the visit? A—It was the year before I made my visit to Washington.

Q—How long did you stay in Chicago? A—About six weeks.

Q—You are quite sure that you did not go with June in any way through to Chicago? A—I know that I went on with June.

Q—Would you refresh your memory if I told you that June was living in Chicago from May, 1911, to July, 1911, at No. 3440 Berkshan avenue, and that you went on to June? A—No I never went to Chicago to see June. She went with me at the time.

Met Ainsworth by Accident.

Q—Did you meet Mr. Ainsworth while there? A—I met him more or less through accident. I found him sitting on a bench in the park.

Q—You had a talk with him about having an interest in the cigar business? A—Yes, sir.

Q—And you sought an interest in the cigar business with him? A—I paid $75 down.

Q—Where was Mr. Ainsworth living at that time? A—I do not know.

Q—Were you staying with June at 3323 Grand boulevard? A—Yes, sir.

Q—You had Mr. Ainsworth arrested for running away? A—No, sir, I did not have him arrested.

Q—Was he in the floor store? A—I do not know. I met them after a short time and found that he had gone.

Q—You got $50 of the money back? A—Yes, and also $6 toward a railroad ticket for Mr. Ainsworth.

Q—Where did you get the $75? A—I got that from Mr. Ainsworth's friend who gives me years before and I got $75 for it.

Q—Did you not see Mr. Ainsworth before you met him in the park? A—No, sir.

Mrs. Eaton told of living in Washington with Mrs. Barney, and also told of her marriage to Eaton. She said Mrs. Barker questioned her at length on Eaton's matters while there.

Mrs. Eaton said that she could not recall everything, saying:

"You know it is hard to remember all the little details."

District Attorney Barker then introduced the diary in which the records of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Ainsworth had been made. Mrs. Eaton went over the entries very carefully, and said that one night about three months before the admiral's death she sat down and had a good, long chat, not only with him and the flames in the fires showed her intentions to have the debt contest in 1913.

Here Mr. Barker read to those of Mrs. Eaton usually found the pages of the diary while the witness identified her own handwriting showing her entries as read from the admiral's.

Mrs. Eaton said she stood at 12:40 after sixteen hours as a witness, nine of which she had been under a cross-examination by District Attorney Barker. She was calm and cool, seated at her attorney's, Morse, and took her meal outside the bar privilege, guarded by Deputy Sheriff Joseph Dillingwood.

The next witness for the defense was Dr. Arthur E. Austin of No. 110 Marlboro street Boston. He testified that he was called in consultation with Dr. Osgood, Dr. Bowditch Colonel Bartlett and Thomas Symmons and had seen the admiral on Friday morning. He is a University of Virginia, University of Texas and Harvard graduate, at Carney Hospital, South Boston.

Q—Dr. Austin, the finding of three grains of arsenic in Admiral Eaton's stomach after he had eaten a hearty dinner on Wednesday noon, vomited at 4 o'clock, had some Friday and Saturday night and died on Saturday would indicate what to you? A—That he had taken the arsenic some time previous than was found in his stomach.

Takes Issue With Whitney.

Q—You have heard the testimony of Professor Whitney and Dr. Baleh? A—I do.

Q—Do you agree with them? A—I do not.

Q—What is your opinion formed in hearing the evidence of the witnesses and by hearing the report of the autopsy and by hearing the evidence that Admiral Eaton died from arsenic poisoning? A—My own opinion, Counsel, Wednesday at 4 o'clock the admiral had taken all the arsenic that was found in his stomach, and died on Saturday, or in the quantity of the dose of arsenic and the time administered?

A—My opinion is that only a single dose was taken, and that on Wednesday following the noon meal or with it

NEW HAVEN PAID HIGH FOR CAPITAL TIPS

RIOT IN NEW YORK IN MAIL DRIVER STRIKE

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Excited crowds hemmed in by mounted policemen and reserves after threatening demonstrations in the vicinity of the Tombs prison, where 200 strikers were confined, were dispersed by the police with clubs and drawn revolvers today.

An attack was made on the strikers' patrol wagon as it left the prison, and a number of the police were injured. Brooks and others were rushed to Bellevue hospital. Chauffeur Ray Calderwood was injured and Policeman Barry, who gave chase, suffered a fractured arm.

Two arrests were made. The charge against one of the men was disorderly conduct. The charge against the other, whose address was given in care of Mr. Russell.

In discussing the New Haven scandal of leaving in touch with Interstate Commerce Commissioners, Mr. Brandeis said: "The attention of the New Haven's methods was brought to the attention of the people. I have been asked a number of times to explain the duties of some of the men who have received payments from the road. My answer is always the same—that all that information will be presented to the Public Service Commission at the proper time. I have no opinion, however, to volunteer stating at this time that H. H. Bolden who, according to a voucher filed yesterday, received a payment of $500 in January, is one of a number of men who are in the employ of the New Haven road who have been paid for services rendered affecting the interests of the company. He has been at the state house for years, doing this sort of work for the company. I have nothing to say at this time as to why he is not registered as a lobbyist. He appeared in my office and I am certain that this sort of work is the sort of work performed by a legislative agent."

FATHER M'COY SCORES CRUEL 'RITUAL' CHARGE

WORCESTER, Oct. 28.—A remarkable fight that the Rev. John J. McCoy of Annunciation Church, Boston, is making against the foul murder trial in Russia, was the theme of the mass meeting of 1,500 men and women of all creeds at Poli's theatre here to protest against the trial. Resolutions were adopted denouncing the false accusations against Mendel Beilis. Copies will be sent to President Wilson, Ex-Mayor Lomasney and Governor Foss.

"Tyranny in any form is hateful, but tyranny in this age because of religion is intolerable.

"To lie about a man is hateful enough, but to lie about a helpless people is meaner still; but to brand a whole race and religion with unproved infamy, and to send charges broadcast to the whole world is a thing so cruel and unjust that a man could not conceive it possible in a civilized community or any day outside the lines of Russia.

"The charge that is made against your people has not even the merit of originality. The same thing was heralded in the early Christian days. The pagan persecutors falsely swore that the blood of babes for use in the mysteries of the altar, and the clouded mobs shook heaven with the cry, 'Christians to the lions!' 'The Christians to the force.'

"Come Not to Destroy."

"Not again shall they say the blood of the young is used, this time of the Christian young, for the ritualistic proceedings in the synagogue, and in place of the dripping mares of the ravished lions, we have the blood of the lonely death amid the eternal ices of Siberia.

"When will men be human? When will peace and neighborly love have greater arguing of head than politics or trade? The Christ we Catholic people hail as messiah was like you, a Hebrew, and He himself has said, 'I come not to destroy the law, but to fulfill it,' and love of God and neighbor is the fulfillment.

"The Hebrews are our forebears in faith in God. Your patriarchs at the foot deer looking to heaven are ours as well. Your prophets, with the trembling spirit of God on their lips, are ours, too. Your David, the prophet, sang for our race's comfort when he sang for joy in yours.

"The glory of the Maccabees does not belong to you alone, but to every man who has a soul to him to honor virtue, to admire heroism, and to laud self-sacrifice when offered in defense of the altars of one's people and the sacred fraternalness wherein we build our family ties.

And so, gentlemen, your neighbors, the Catholic priests and people, stand by you in your hour of distress. We do not believe the bitter word spoken against you.

Let Conscience Rule.

We too have the martyr blood in us, and therefore we can deeply feel, and we join with you heart and hand tonight in your brave protest against the black aspersion, and we pray with you to the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, that the sad gray day of suffering may soon pass forever, and the men of the new and brighter generation may find love and gentle tolerant of one another, and each permitted freely to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, and making, as God intended it through mutual love of one for the other as sons of God, this earth, the very threshold of the eternal heaven."

CARDINAL GIBBONS DENIES BELIEF IN 'RITUAL' CHARGES

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 28—James Cardinal Gibbons has written this letter to Edward Menkin, a Chicago attorney:

My Dear Mr. Menkin: In regard to the charge that the Jews are using blood for ritual purposes, I beg to assure you that I have never for an instant believed in any such accusation, and I regret that such a false accusation should form the basis for such persecution.

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) J. CARD. Gibbons,
Archbishop of Baltimore.

ELECTRIC MEN OPEN FOURTH CONVENTION

By J. C. KERRISON.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28.—The first day of the fourth annual convention of the Electric Vehicle Association of America came to a close in a blaze of glory and color in this city last evening. The convention was attended by something like 200 delegates representing central branches of the electrical world and many of close to the builder and user of electric vehicles, both commercial and pleasure, was brought forth for consideration and discussion.

It is safe to say that no previous convention was so tangible with business as was yesterday's session, and that the interest was keen was evidenced by the fact that the delegates were in attendance at the various sessions and not inspecting the points of interest in the city. New York and New England took a prominent part in all but two of the papers presented.

Nelson Currie intelligently discussed "The mechanic, the central station and electric truck," bringing forth many valuable points. The Electric Motor Car Club of Boston was the subject of a talk by Baker, and he told of the work that this organization has done in New England.

The annual dinner was served early in the evening and from came a visit to the south side garages, transportation being furnished by electric automobiles. The smoker and concert gave rare last.

Hood Addresses the Milk Dealers

Tells of the Problem of Distributing Milk in Boston.

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—C. H. Hood, president of H. P. Hood & Sons of Boston, read a paper at the annual convention of the International Milk Dealers' Association here, on the "Problem of Handling and Distributing Milk in the City."

"The public realizes," he said, "that a higher price must be paid for a good than a bad product. And the milk dealer has a hazardous business. Let an east wind strike Boston during a series of hot Summer days and the demand for milk falls 20,000 quarts, but the cows continue to produce milk. The big problem is to handle milk that is bought, but never sold."

'Pankhurst Absurd,' Says Octave Thanet

Novelist in Boston to Further Cause of Anti-Suffragists.

"I think the time has come for active warfare against woman suffrage. Women do not need or want the vote," is the declaration of Miss Alice French, more widely known as "Octave Thanet," the novelist, who is in Boston at the present time, as a guest at the Chilton Club.

Miss French will lecture today at a meeting of anti-suffragists, at the home of Miss Alberta Houghton, No. 56 Garden street, Cambridge.

"I think Mrs. Pankhurst is a brilliant woman," she continued, "but she suffers from eccentricity. Her zeal leads her into absurdities. Nowadays, when we try to reduce danger to non-combatants, she declares herself a non-combatant, but throws bombs and blows up houses. She is not playing fair."

NEWS OF ATTRACTIONS AT BOSTON PLAYHOUSES

ROMANCE AND VICTOR HERBERT MUSIC SCORE

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Romance has never been so dull—or feeble—that it could not be revived for the benefit of comic opera. Romance and Victor Herbert had their fling at the Colonial last evening in "The Madcap Duchess"—and the evening went largely to Mr. Herbert, who worked like a stevedore over his musicians and who kept a fatherly eye upon the songsters who vocalized his work.

"The Madcap Duchess" carried you back to the days when comic opera was more to be depended upon than it is nowadays crops of revolt years. It was substantial in detail, with music that was written to keep through the Winter and a book that fairly sizzles with eighteenth century romance. It was a dainty affair, with no hilarious moments, but it had plenty of melody that fell sweetly upon your ears, and much more than its share of the luxurious costuming gave color to the days of Louis XV. There was nothing about it to remind you of the prevailing styles in light opera—its foundation was good music, consistently arranged and presented by voices that knew their business.

Ann Swinburne Returns.

"The Madcap Duchess" might alone be commended for bringing Ann Swinburne back to Boston. Miss Swinburne was the particular delight of last evening's performance—she gave you good cheer to the accompaniment of melody that had nothing through her splendid interpretation. She was a madcap duchess with a full jewelled voice and an industrious ambition to keep it running. Miss Swinburne gave Mr. Herbert her faithful support, and she appeared to enjoy it.

If romantic opera could be successfully carried on without amorous tenors proposing no one would dig out of the aching heart. You must have a tenor—it can't be helped. If you accept present day standards. And you had one last night. Fresh from grand opera, Glenn Hall was all that his role demanded. He had voice and enthusiasm, but his contribution of grand opera acting made him appear at considerable disadvantage. Some day a courageous producer is going to turn his back to the wall and present a well-sung tenor-of-many as an operatic hero. It should be encouraged.

Many of Mr. Herbert's musical numbers were attractive to a degree that may threaten them with popularity, although for the most part the score moved in higher circles. Mr. Herbert confessed, in an encore, to the audience, that "The Madcap Duchess" aimed higher than mere ragtime popularity. These who prefer their comic opera with light touches, dainty settings and more or less formality of manner will find this piece easy going. The music reflects Mr. Herbert at his best, and the book contributed chiefly by Justin Huntly McCarthy was not out of step with the score.

Sane and Sensible.

While Mr. Herbert proved himself a headstar to the performance, it was Miss Swinburne who held "The Madcap Duchess" on its feet—even Mr. Herbert conceded that. The young lady was alive to every situation, whether it concerned the musical numbers or the action of the piece. She not only sang well, but she acted like a seasoned veteran in every important moment.

"The Madcap Duchess" is sane and sensible, and it should prosper through the exceptionally brilliant music that Victor Herbert has given it.

Elsie Ferguson in New Play at the Park.

Elsie Ferguson's engagement here in "The Strange Woman" was begun at the Park Theatre last evening. The play was American in theme, with the scenes laid in a town of the Middle West. William Hurlbert, the author of the comedy, was also responsible for the "Fighting Hope." "The Strange Woman" gave Miss Ferguson ample opportunity for the display of the charms that have endeared her to many playgoers. The play will be reviewed in Tuesday's AMERICAN.

Globe Theatre.

Hyman Adler and his company presented a strong dramatic playlet, "The Miser's Dream," at the Globe Theatre yesterday. Another attractive feature was supplied by the Mori Brothers, a troupe of Japs, who delivered new acrobatic tricks. Rosa Boghner and company, with new ideas in "rag pictures," George Martin, a comedian on the wire, and Rolando Brothers the "bounce athletes," were also seen.

Waldron's Casino.

"The Gay Morkers" entertained two big audiences at the Casino Theatre yesterday. It was like-wire burlesque, with a score of pretty girls for a background.

'BLUE BIRD' AT THE SHUBERT, BANISHES CARE

Do business cares worry?
Does wifey fume and fret at home?

Or do little Tommy and Dickie and Harry and Sister Sue and the rest of the little ones seem study-weary?

If so, take them to see "The Blue Bird."

No matter what the ailment, be it of adult or of child, just write this little prescription down:

"TAKE—one performance of the 'Blue Bird.' Then TAKE another and repeat as the case may require."

Then take the prescription and have it filled up at the Shubert Theatre box office on Tremont street.

See the dream play and you forget business worries, cares, sorrows, everything that's unpleasant. Not only do you get your money's worth, but you get what all your money can't buy—happiness. If grey-haired, you are wafted back to the joys of childhood. If middle-aged, ditto. And the young find in it an echo of their own buoyancy, and the younger children—why, they're simply translated to the seventh heaven of delight.

Perhaps you already know that the quest of the Blue Bird is anybolic of the search for happiness. Perhaps, too, you already know Tytyl, and Tylette the cat, and great Black Night, and the Fairy Berylune—well, all these go to make up a production which you don't want to miss.

Scenically the show is entrancing. From the standpoint of the acting—well, just witness some of the persons appearing in the Maeterlinck fantasy. Master Burford Hampden as Tytyl, Cecil Yapp as the cat, W. H. Denny as the dog, Margaret Fairbrich, Angela Romeo, Charles Hampden, Ethel Brandon, Alice Butler, Helene Lackaye, Harriet Sterling, Margaret Millette, John Sullivan, George Sylvester and Dore Davidson.

"The Blue Bird" is offering its "welcome and farewell" on this visit to Boston. It's only for a week, so you'd better write out that prescription and have it filled NOW.

Henry Jewett Players at Plymouth Theatre.

The Henry Jewett Players began their conquest of Boston at the Plymouth Theatre last evening with "Lots to Do A-Gardening," a comedy of New England life written by Florence J. Lewis. Both Mr. Jewett's company and the play were given a hearty reception. The central idea in the engagement of the Jewett players is to give Boston a producing company—an organization fashioned after the old Boston Museum company. The opening last evening was all that any one could desire, if you can take the enthusiasm of the first audience as an index of popular sentiment. "Lots to Do A-Gardening" will be given an extended review in Wednesday's AMERICAN.

IN ONE MINUTE! CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN—COLDS AND CATARRH VANISH

Stops Nasty Discharge, Clears Stuffed Head, Heals Inflamed Air Passages and You Breathe Freely.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle, anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils, and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membranes which line the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges, and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lie awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucus dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

Lancers to Dance the Refined 'Tango'

Edict Goes Forth from Old Military Organization.

Even the gallant, rollicking National Guardsmen of Massachusetts are to be restrained in their dancing. The edict comes from Captain John Kenny, commander of Troop A, the smart National Lancer organization, one of the oldest military outfits in the State.

The non-commissioned officers of the troop have planned a merry round of Winter dances, the first on the night of November 13.

Now Captain Kenny announces: "There will be no 'kitchen sink' or 'Boston dip.' I shall expect the members of this troop to use discretion how they dance the so-called 'rag dances.'

"I think the 'Tango' has been refined so that it is quite proper."

General Crozier to Wed This Week

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The marriage will take place here this week of Brigadier-General William Crozier, Chief of Ordnance of the United States Army, and Miss May Williams, daughter of the late Charles Augustus Williams of Washington.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Henry W. Clarke, president of the First National Bank of Detroit, holds a very optimistic view of the future of the automobile business. "The automobile business," he says, "is sounder today than ever, in spite of the many failures; in fact if there were more failures it would be still more staple. The time has passed when a company can solicit orders for its cars, taking part of the purchase price with the order, and with this capital obtain the necessary parts.

"Some concerns were able to do that a few years ago, and a few got rich at it, but the big profits have been knocked out of the business, and it now gives a fair return for the money invested. The business is peculiar in that it demands much capital coupled with great business ability. The men who have built up the big automobile concerns have been business men of the highest type. Lack of capital and lack of ability has driven the weaker concerns to the wall. The fittest has survived, as they do in all lines of endeavor."

W. S. Pettit, advertising manager of the Studebaker Corporation, has resigned to become sales manager of the Commerce Motor Car Company of Detroit. Paul Hale Brindle is now in charge of the Studebaker advertising department.

"Automobile Topics" is authority for the statement that Alvan T. Fuller, the Boston distributor of Packard cars, has purchased the Packard agency in Albany, N. Y.

Joe Donovan, Tom Glenn and W. H. Stevens, who have been up in the woods of Maine, are back in Boston after a very successful hunting trip. There will be plenty of venison steak along Gasoline Row for some time to come.

St. James Theatre.

The feature act of the new bill at the St. James Theatre yesterday was furnished by Thomas J. Ryan, who appeared in "Mag Haggerty's Reception." There were a half dozen other good numbers.

Orpheum Theatre.

Hardeen, the hand-cuff king, was the principal feature of the new program at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday. His contribution to the bill was a series of astonishing tests that bewildered his audiences. Other vaudeville and motion picture features were included in the program.

Howard Athenaeum.

"The Dolly Dimple" burlesquers supplied a new assortment of melody and fun at the Old Howard yesterday. In the continuous part of the program Joe Fogler and Jimmy Morgan, bicycle champions, were featured in a smart act.

MISS HAYES IN MUSICAL PLAY AT THE GAIETY

Gertrude Hayes, that charming and versatile comedienne, is at the Gaiety Theatre. She appears in a two-act musical comedy, "The Garden of Girls." It goes without saying that the show is a good one. Pretty girls, who can dance and sing; clever men, who can act, sing, dance and "be funny," make up the cast.

Gertrude Hayes plays the role of an American flower girl. The plot is laid in Germany. She wins the hearts of the Germans and an English duke, but in doing so gets into difficulties with Mrs. Gibson Stanhope, a woman of doubtful nobility. Mildred Stoller played this part with much ability. Miss Hayes was, of course, a winner in the little love skit and was married to the duke's son.

The piece is enlivened by some exceedingly clever variety acts. One, in particular, is a travesty on the play, "Within the Law." It is entitled "Without the Law." Billy McIntire, Hal Pearson and Gertrude Hayes make up the cast and succeed in pleasing the audience with their clever thrusts at high finance and present-day business methods.

Anna Propp, Marie Hilton, Ruth Sullivan and Madeline Sullivan, who claim the honor of being the smallest dancers on the stage, won their share of applause with their dancing skill.

The Five Airvons, who appeared as Mexican singers, proved themselves to be vocalists of very high class.

The show is replete with bits of humor that cause a laugh every minute. The musical numbers in which the chorus takes part would reflect credit upon any high class musical comedy. "Sunshine and Roses," by Mildred Stoller, is particularly well sung, as was "You're Just the Sort of Girl for a Boy Like Me." This is very catchy and was received with a round of applause. From the rise of the curtain until the drop on the last act the audience is pleased. And this is a great deal to say of any burlesque show.

Character Studies Please at National

Character studies in song, something new in vaudeville, pleased an audience that filled the National Theatre last night. The studies were presented by Charles B. Lawlor and daughters. Wilbur & Sweatnam gave an exhibition of his prowess as "The original ragtime clarionet." The Bellets proved entertaining as equilibrists and gymnasts.

Kelly and Lafferty brought rounds of applause as dancers. They introduced some new and novel methods of dancing. Hickman Brothers lived up to their reputation as mirth provokers, and Billy Lee and company delivered the "wallop" to a number of leading questions that convulsed all. Zazelle and company, pantomimical comedians and humorists, brought tears of joyous hilarity. A new set of pictures preceded the vaudeville. "Joe" Knowles spoke during the evening.

Plays That Remain.

"Bought and Paid For" remains at the Majestic. It is a gripping story of American life with plenty of good humor.

"The Sunshine Girl" began a new week at the Hollis last evening. Julia Saunderson makes an attractive star for the entertainment.

"Ziegfeld Follies" entered upon a new week at the Tremont last evening. It is a big, merry and musical show.

"Joseph and His Brethren" is now on its final week at the Boston Theatre. This is a spectacular drama of the Book of Genesis.

"Les Miserables," in motion pictures, is still at Tremont Temple, where its popularity is increasing.

John Craig a Hit in 'Held by the Enemy'

"Held by the Enemy," William Gillette's famous drama, which is filled with love and war, was presented last night at the Castle Square Theatre. Many lovers of the drama were present to renew their acquaintance with its stirring scenes. Its plot brings to view several leading characters, and its scenes are laid in a Southern city, held by Union forces.

The romantic motive of the stirring drama is the fact that Colonel Prescott, the Northern soldier, falls in love with Rachel McCreery, a Southern belle. Rachel was already betrothed to Lieutenant Gordon Hayden, a Southern soldier. Her Southern sweetheart adds plenty of romance to the drama and made a distinct hit.

John Craig appeared as Lieutenant Hayden, while William P. Carleton played the part of Colonel Prescott.

Doris Olsson took the part of Rachel, the heroine of the drama. McCreery, which part was acted by Donald Meek, the stock company's comedian, was the war correspondent. Others in the cast were Mr. Ernest Mr. Roberts, Mr. Ormond, Miss Shirley and Miss Gill, all of whom were favorably received.

Grand Opera House.

"The Mischief Makers" began a week's visit at the Grand Opera House yesterday. To re were many merry moments in the show—also a full complement of pretty girls.

NETHERSOLE, IN 'SAPHO,' CHARMS AT B. F. KEITH'S

With the same power and fascination with which she charmed audiences in days gone by, Miss Olga Nethersole appears at Keith's this week in the third act of "Sapho," and received a flattering reception. The celebrated English actress has lost none of her subtle charm, and in the dramatic climax of the scene she showed that finesse which made for her a high place in the dramatic world.

The third act of "Sapho," as dramatized by Clyde Fitch from the novel of M. Alphonse Dondet, makes a wonderfully complete playlet in which to bring out the talents of Miss Nethersole.

Miss Nethersole is very ably assisted by A. E. Whinnington Barnes. She repeats "Sapho" today and tomorrow, and for the last three days of the week plays a one-act piece entitled "The Last Scene of the Play," an adaptation from Mrs. W. K. Clifford's story.

The entire bill at Keith's this week is exceptionally strong. Allan Dinehart and Ann Heritage were excellent in a playlet, "Just Half Way," which was seen here for the first time. Sophie Tucker proved a big favorite and sang songs that those in the audience asked her to sing. Harry Breen has a new act entitled "Here's a Nut," and Harry is certainly some nut. Will Morrissey and Dolly Hackett were good, and Dolly is certainly a pretty girl. The three Keatons were good in a rough and tumble skit, and Natalie and Augie Dagwell were charming to look upon and can sing. The Emilie sisters and Howard's animal spectacle made up the program, which was without a drill or ordinary number.

Sousa and His Band.

Sousa and his band, following two local concerts, are now on a tour of New England. The engagements for this week include: Monday at Fall River, Tuesday at Attleboro and Milford, Wednesday at Providence, Thursday at Springfield, Friday at Derby and Middletown, Ct., and Saturday at Woolsey Hall, New Haven.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

A new list of vaudeville features and motion pictures were presented at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday. The bill was attractive in many ways.

FOSS ASKS GARDNER AND BIRD TO QUIT

Politicians throughout Massachusetts today discussed with interest the broadside hurled by Governor Foss in his campaign speech at Lowell. Discussing state questions, the governor said in part:

"I call upon Augustus P. Gardner and Charles S. Bird to announce to the people of this State their withdrawal as candidates for Governor.

"If they do not do this, I shall charge them with being parties to a conspiracy to ruin the Commonwealth of Massachusetts over to the Tammany trio, Thomas F. Riley, Martin Lomasney and John F. Fitzgerald.

"Mr. Gardner and Mr. Bird are well aware of the fact that either of them has the slightest chance of being elected Governor.

"Mr. Gardner inaugurated his campaign by supplanting the discipline of the Republican party with which began with the Roosevelt revolt and was made worse by the recent primary contest. And the remnant of Republicans who were with Gardner in the beginning has gradually fallen away.

"Mr. Gardner admits his defeat and announces his purpose to be no higher than to get more votes than any Democratic candidate. Republicans who vote for Gardner can have no other object than the defeat of the Progressive candidate, and Gardner cannot count on getting more than these.

"No Hope for Bird."

"Bird has not the slightest chance [illegible] Governor and he knows it. [illegible] hope is to lead Gardner in the race. The humiliating vote of the Republicans can be the only result of the Progressive party's existence, and that is the object of Bird's candidacy in the first place.

"Mr. Bird's candidacy is criticised without justification, even if his purpose was worthy of respect, for Bird has not the slightest chance of equalling the vote of Gardner. The Progressive vote of a year ago was due to three things which do not now exist—our personal friend Taft, the enthusiasm for Roosevelt and the desire for a progressive spirit in national affairs.

"To create an issue for this State campaign Mr. Bird could devise nothing better than to adopt as his platform the record of what I have already achieved in office. The one cry of the absolute control of the transportation monopoly he has declared to be entirely satisfactory. My speeches up to date he has refused to discuss it. He is therefore a candidate without an issue and without a chance.

"Such a candidate cannot remain into life in a State campaign a national movement which died with the defeat of Roosevelt and has given no sign of animation in any contest since that time nor in the enrollment of voters, which has lost of all in Massachusetts.

"The apparent importance of the Bird candidacy is due entirely to the purely physical vigor of the canvass and to the threats of the Tammany Democratic trio to send a storm to the street note that Bird is sounding and to use him as a decoy.

"The real issue in this campaign is not the election of David I. Walsh as Governor or Mr. Walsh were elected, he would not be Governor.

Friendly to Walsh.

"I have given evidence of personal friendship for Mr. Walsh, and I have done more to gratify his ambition for office than any other man. But as a personal friend of Mr. Walsh, I believe that no greater calamity could happen to him than to sit in the Governor's chair with Tom Riley at his back, Martin Lomasney at his right and John F. Fitzgerald at his right. And every real friend of Walsh knows that he can not sit down into the Governor's chair only with these strong arms clutching at his shoulders.

"Nobody knows better than I that the one thing necessary in a Governor of Massachusetts is the power to say to the leaders buried by Governor Foss in his campaign speech at Lowell. Discussing state questions, the governor said in part:

"I call upon Augustus P. Gardner and Charles S. Bird to announce to the people of this State their withdrawal as candidates for Governor.

Not on Roll of Honor.

"The Boston Post of June 20, 1901, on its front page, contained a statement of the fact, to which was appended as a 'roll of honor' the names of those who voted to sustain Governor Crane's veto. Then there followed what the Post called the other 'roll,' which is characterized as follows:

"Here are the members of the House who voted against Governor Crane, who stood by the corporation against the rights of the people, and who deserve a long retirement to private life. Cut this out.

"And heading this list was the name of David I. Walsh.

"Now, I do not agree with those who would infer from this an evil intention in David I. Walsh. I could say many things from my acquaintance with 'Dave' Walsh which would make what I have just said seem less serious. And I could make a better defence of 'Dave' than he could make for himself.

"But my purpose is merely to illustrate a certain characteristic, and with this object I read back to himself said in explanation of his action.

"Now I am thoroughly convinced that David I. Walsh is honest, and a man free of dishonest act. But, as a matter of your public duty and mine, I ask you to consider the following circumstances:

"A year ago Charles S. Bird was running for Governor, and Hon. John F. Fitzgerald was running for the United States Senate. John F. Fitzgerald and Martin Lomasney made a personal effort to see to it that a Progressive candidate for the Legislature was nominated in every district, and they did all in their power to make the Progressive campaign as dangerous to the Republican legislative candidates as possible, with the object of making John F. Fitzgerald United States Senator and Martin Lomasney Speaker of the House of Representatives. In this they were not successful.

Confusion to Voters.

"But this year conditions are more favorable and the entire Tammany trio is straining every resource to divert to the Progressive candidates every vote that would not go to their own candidates, in order to divert to a harmless opponent the vote of every man opposed to the candidates they are. And this year they are applying their scheme to the candidates for Governor, office from representative up to Governor.

"Now, by reason of the confusion to the voters caused by the multiplicity of candidates and the unparalleled weakness of the Republican cause, it is quite possible that the Legislature may come under the benevolent control of Thomas F. Riley, Martin Lomasney and John F. Fitzgerald.

"Now, I do not ask you to believe that David I. Walsh would be a willing party to the legislation put through by the Riley-Lomasney-Fitzgerald trio. Martin Lomasney and John F. Fitzgerald. But I do ask you to close your eyes, call up in vision of the Tammany organization in Hall, and do ask you if David I. Walsh is in the man to be the governor in charge with these three hovering about him, and in framing messages, making appointments and deciding upon vetoes, to cope with the personality and business of Thomas F. Riley, the tremendous force of Martin Lomasney and the perpetual and pernicious activity of mind, body and appetite for spoils and power of John F. Fitzgerald.

"I have had an unparalleled opportunity in my three terms as Mayor to get some measure of the willingness of John F. Fitzgerald to run every detail of the public business of Massachusetts, and I do not believe that anybody, even myself, could exaggerate the havoc that Fitzgerald and his associates would create in every department, not only of the State government, but also of those institutions of local government and municipal life which, out of fear of just such politicians, the people of Massachusetts have confided to the superintendence of the State government."

"Walsh the Man to Beat."

"The State finances, the State City Service, the State police, the metropolitan police, the municipal police, the excise board, the public schools, the park system, the water system, the public institutions, the Boston Finance Commission and every possible source of jobs, patronage and graft would be drawn upon for tribute to build up a political machine that would put John F. Fitzgerald in the United States Senate and distribute the other offices in the State among his friends and fasten a Massachusetts Tammany upon the people it would not shake off in a generation.

"I ask the people of this state to contemplate the solution of the transportation problem that this regime would bring and to say whether or not Augustus P. Gardner and Charles S. Bird, in aiding the plans of the Tammany trio, are for or against the people of Massachusetts on the transportation question.

"Now, it is admitted on all sides that Walsh is the man to beat. And it has been left to me to demonstrate what the election of Walsh would mean, and the public necessity of making his defeat certain. It is admitted on all sides not only that neither Gardner nor Bird can defeat Walsh, but also that the continued candidacy of each makes the defeat of Walsh less certain.

"As a good citizen, I appeal to Augustus P. Gardner and Charles S. Bird, as good citizens, to call on them to announce their withdrawal as candidates for Governor.

"They took the field early in the game, but they were shown that they cannot play ball. I call upon them to get off the field and to give way to somebody who can."

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Thickness and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn grey, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and prevent hair falling.

Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get this ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at any drug store, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of mess.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

JEROME SCORES THAW COUNSEL AT HEARING

"In the seven years of the Thaw case, filth, shame and corruption have rested in each succeeding place where it has come up. At the first trial at least two jurors were bribed. One attorney has been sent to the penitentiary. Another is being tried for disbarment.

"In the second writ of habeas corpus hearing, I have a letter passed on the latter head of an attorney trying to be a juror, in the last habeas corpus hearing large sums of money were illegally expended. Mr. Stanford White's murder shows this.

"The money was spent to keep a man from coming to testify that this degenerate prisoner lived in his house under an assumed name. A similar condition of affairs existed in Delaware, when Senator Gardner and Charles S. Bird, in aiding the plans of the Tammany trio, are for or against the people of Massachusetts on the transportation question.

"Now, it is admitted on all sides that Walsh is the man to beat. And it has been left to me to demonstrate what the election of Walsh would mean, and the public necessity of making his defeat certain. It is admitted on all sides not only that neither Gardner nor Bird can defeat Walsh, but also that the continued candidacy of each makes the defeat of Walsh less certain.

"As a good citizen, I appeal to Augustus P. Gardner and Charles S. Bird, as good citizens, to call on them to announce their withdrawal as candidates for Governor.

"They took the field early in the game, but they were shown that they cannot play ball. I call upon them to get off the field and to give way to somebody who can."

Charges Corrupt Practices.

"In Dutchess County corrupt practices were invoked against the friend Jury. I know of a cash offer to bribe a former head of Matteawan. Twenty-five thousand dollars in cash was offered to this man. Another agent and, now respectable citizen, as the result of bribery, fares a term in State prison.

"A federal inquiry or a murderer—take your choice. Thaw is one or the other.

"His lawyers want all this continuance because they want to keep and hold him as long as he can get a dollar.

"Ever since the slaying of Stanford White he has been surrounded by more disreputable in the practice of law. And Governor Stone knows they will cling to him until the last of the Thaw coin lands are burned.

"I brand any lawyer who would raise the question of good faith as either wilfully deceiving himself or asserting corrupt charges for the purpose of making money.

"Good faith is above a degenerate criminal, and New York's long fight against the Thaw money has been marked by criminality and disgrace."

Ex-Governor Stone replied in language quite as forceful as Jerome's.

"Those rather incendiary charges Thaw with all these institutions and allegations of bribery, corrupt practices and strictures of a political criminalities!"

Thaw Counsel Replies.

"We do not know, because we have not seen the indictment. Neither do we know the subject matter of the indictment, and I do not believe our request for a continuance in order that we may acquaint ourselves with them is [illegible].

"We do not question the good faith of New York, but we very probably will question the good faith of the representatives of the State of New York.

"There is no precedent in the history of extradition where a lawyer has jumped from one county to another to obtain an indictment; and if Mr. Jerome had not been successful in New York county, it is not at all unlikely that he would have jumped into New Jersey.

"I am accused of knowing of certain expenditures in New York, but I have no knowledge whatever concerning them."

At this point Jerome sprang to his feet, interrupting with the query:

"Why don't you answer my question on the witness stand?"

"I will take the stand now, sir," replied Stone, "and answer every question you propose to put to me."

"This is not a story of corrupt practices and bribery," he resumed, "but a story of 'The Hound of the Baskervilles,' hounding this poor boy, seeking to prevent his return to his mother, while the sympathy of the whole world cries out against it, except from a few interested people in New York."

The hearing concluded, a wild scene ensued, the crowd stamping and cheering for several minutes.

Woman Thanks Counsel.

Finally Governor Felker ordered City Marshal George Young to clear the room.

Silence instantly followed and Jerome, much plouded that the crowd be given "one more chance."

"I guess they will behave now," he said grimly.

"I guess they will," agreed the Governor, smilingly.

Governor Felker then gave Thaw's counsel until November 3 to file further briefs and November until November 6 to file his final answer. Lawyer Stone added that another public hearing was not absolutely necessary, in his opinion.

Thaw and his counsel, on the contrary, were besieged by an eager crowd, and for several minutes Thaw was forced to shake hands with his admirers.

One elderly lady, with tears in her eyes, stepped up to ex-Governor Stone.

"I want to thank you," she said, her voice trembling with emotion.

"What for?" asked the lawyer.

"For your masterly work in Thaw's behalf," she replied. "I am a mother and I sympathize with Mrs. Thaw."

Thaw got back to the Hayes Hotel as soon as he could and ate a hearty meal.

He gave the waitress a 50-cent tip.

"What's the matter, Harry?" she promised him, "but will keep it to remember you by as long as I live."

Cassidy Talks to Worcester Women

American's Pure Food Expert Shows Them Their Power for Good.

Harry P. Cassidy, the AMERICAN'S pure food expert, told more than 2,000 members of the Catholic Woman's Club of St. Anne's Church, Worcester, some of his experiences as a food inspector, at a largely attended meeting in the Laurel street clubhouse, that city.

Mr. Cassidy was introduced by Miss Agnes E. Daniels, president of the club, who said: "Mr. Cassidy is a graduate of Roy, John J. McCoy, the well known Catholic orator.

"The food question is up to you women," Mr. Cassidy said. "If you will but refuse to buy impure and adulterated foods, the dealers will be obliged to keep them off the market.

"The power of women, once they are aroused was plainly shown out in Chicago, where the women defeated last week for election to the State supreme bench, Judge Leslie Paterbaugh, because of his friendliness to corporations in 197 personal injury cases.

At the end of his two hours' discourse, Mr. Cassidy was given a rising vote of thanks by the club.

Wild Deer Upsets Man in Dorchester

Scares School Children, Evades Police and Escapes into Woods.

The deer, which is thought to have escaped from the Boston reservation of the Metropolitan park system, had been pursued for a mile or more when it ran by primary school by two dogs. A number of children were in the yard at the time and the frightened animal crashed through the fence. Several policemen hurried to the scene in the auto patrol. By this time the deer broke away from a policeman or schoolboys, leaped over a fence and disappeared in the Milton woods.

White of that city to approve a contract awarded by the school committee of Holyoke to McLean Brothers to furnish the furniture for the Highland Grammar Schoolhouse for the sum of $2,000, was dismissed by the Supreme Court today.

Evelyn's Love Story

CHAPTER LVI.

"Who so shall tell a tale after a man."—Chaucer.

Thomas J. Minnock's hypnotism story was extended in scantion, however, by one that was quoted of Miss Anna Crane, a masseuse.

Miss Crane was quoted as saying that, with her own eyes, she saw Thaw strike Evelyn when they were together in Paris before their marriage.

But the masseuse was said to be bitterly against Thaw and openly favorable to the prosecution, and the reports of her statements were accompanied by painstaking comments as to their accuracy.

Miss Crane went to the District Attorney's office and later it was said that she did not tell Assistant District Attorney Temple of her story, and the thing like the statements that had been attributed to her.

Miss Crane was brought to Turnbull and Jerry Regan, two detectives, who had been employed White's sister in the last hiss from Thaw and who had failed to do so.

Regan was openly hostile to Thaw and was even putting in his own time without pay in research witnesses for the prosecution. He was mysterious about the new witness, Miss Crane, when he brought her to Turnbull. The woman came and went without being interviewed by reporters at that time. Attention was called in the newspapers to a new but unknown witness for the government.

Late one of the evening newspapers gave much space to what it said was an exclusive interview with Anna Crane. In the statement attributed to her Miss Crane assailed Thaw bitterly, called him a "monster," declared that he beat Evelyn in Paris and even beat her (Miss Crane) when she interfered.

The statement went on that White sent Miss Crane to Paris to find Evelyn and to settle her troubles with Thaw. Then, according to this interview, Miss Crane went across, located Evelyn and Harry in a flat and found that Harry was abusing Evelyn terribly. She and Evelyn finally came back to New York by stratagem and then continued.

Evelyn and Mrs. Nesbit, after a conference with White, decided to bring a suit against Harry Thaw for damages for breach of promise and cruel treatment, and laid damages at $50,000. Mr. White took Evelyn to Lawyer Abraham H. Hummel's office and there he made the statements of the wrongful acts of Thaw.

The publication of this particular part revived discussion of the mooted affidavit, which Evelyn had previously been reported as having made to Hummel, and which was cited as one reason for Harry's bitter hatred to White.

Other newspapers printed all or part of the interview said to have been given out by Miss Crane, but one of the morning papers, on the return of Jerome and Garvan, printed this paragraph:

The statement made by Anna Crane to the District Attorney is entirely different from the one credited to her. In fact, she told the District Attorney that she had never seen Thaw till that Miss Nesbit.

This brief but emphatic reversal rather took the edge off the "Crane" story.

Meanwhile Attorney Hartridge had issued a statement which read in part as follows:

"Mr. Jerome, saying:

All the women who want to can rush their pretty stories of this kind. I don't know anything about Miss Crane. Her story will have no bearing whatever upon the Thaw case. At the proper time we shall be able to dispose of all these nasty tales. These stories about Thaw's behavior in Paris are false. He is no wife beater. Nor is he the type of man that certain interests have made him out to be.

While these statements, real and allegod, by hypnotists, massage artists and all sorts of people, are quite guessing, Harry's mother was far from knowing in her own mind just what course she intended to pursue in the case.

The unhappy widow clung to Black, Olcott, Sydney & Bourne, though not opposing Harry's determination to have Hartridge in charge. The reporters believed that Judge Olcott was still being kept in the case at the mother's insistence, though Hartridge was the leader, so far as Harry went.

In the midst of this an ingenious scheme to save Harry by having him declared insane in a civil process was mentioned. This plan was credited to Judge Olcott and to Mrs. Thaw herself.

The idea was, it was said, to have papers prepared in a civil action to have Harry declared insane. Judge Olcott was to go before the Supreme Court and ask the appointment of a guardian to pass upon Harry's mental condition. If this commission, as expected, should deem Harry insane he would be ordered to an asylum and his mother would doubtless be appointed conservator of his property.

It was figured, as the story went, that this action would cause Harry be insane, having been declared insane, he could not be brought to trial.

It was admitted that the theory of this plan was good. But one flaw in the structure of it would consist in the hearing of the insanity question in the absence of the defendant. Harry's counsel would ask for the appointment of a lunacy commission originating in the criminal court. This hearing would be held in the criminal court and he will be acquitted.

Hartridge admitted he could not speak with authority in the matter. Nor would any member of Judge Olcott's firm commit himself. Nevertheless the lunacy commission gossip continued to grow.

A discovery which strengthened this talk was that Judge Olcott had sent for the papers in the Thaw defense in the Matteawan murder trial. In this case Hamilton, the defendant, shot and killed Maas, whom Hamilton claimed had been doing wronged his sister Charles W. Brodie, who defended Hamilton, made a plea of temporary emotional insanity, saying arose on the "unwritten law."

Hamilton was acquitted. The papers in this case were also used by former Judge John Palmer in securing the acquittal of the Virginia girl.

When it was heard that Judge Olcott had sent for the Hamilton papers, the press and public naturally leaped to the conclusion that Judge Olcott was still fighting against Thaw's release. Harry liked it or not, and that Harry's mother was indorsing this plan.

* * *

An extra flimp was given the disclosure by a despatch from Maryland, where a reporter had found Jerome and had asked him what Dr. John McLane Hamilton thought Harry was insane. Jerome snapped out:

"Dr. Hamilton will be afforded an opportunity to take another risk."

GOETHALS MAY QUIT IF CANAL PLAN LOSES

By WILLIAM HOSTER.

PANAMA, Oct. 28.—One of the closest friends Colonel Goethals has on the Isthmus said today: "The chief engineer of the canal undoubtedly wants to quit if his plans for the prompt reorganization of the Canal Commission are not approved by Washington."

The retain is expected any day now, and Colonel Goethals will leave at once and will be met by Colonel Goethals, who will take him to Culebra for a heart-to-heart talk.

The correspondent that Secretary Garrison, after seeing the situation and talking to the officials will decide against Colonel Goethals' plan.

The AMERICAN learns that the matter has been brought to the direct attention of the President within the past few days. It is said that the President has been asked to consider whether he was really afraid of Colonel Goethals as a presidential possibility, if he would go to the limits to advance him by opposing his disinterested plans than by approving them.

Governor Mitchell plans to see Secretary Garrison and the President to-day to amend the Adamson act. The new features will be those indeed on the faith. It is said that Colonel Goethals will decided one way or another within a week. Further delay would be dangerous to the canal work, which is proceeding with amazing rapidity within Culebra.

MALDEN HIGH TACKLES HARD CUSTOMER IN LOWELL ELEVEN TODAY—ST. MARKS PLAYS LATIN

MALDEN-LOWELL SCHOOLS IN BIG GAME TODAY

Malden High will play Lowell High today at Malden. The game was originally scheduled for last Saturday, but because of the downpour of rain and soggy condition of the field, it was postponed until this afternoon.

So far this year Malden has not been defeated and has only been scored upon once, that by Boston College High, which ward pass. Malden is in the running for ward pass. Malden is in the running for the Suburban League championship. The only reverse the team has met with was the surprise handed by Melrose. Melrose played a 0 to 0 tie. This was unlooked for by Malden, as it had expected to win with ease.

Although Malden's eleven is not of the same standard as the aggregation that represented the school last year, nevertheless, it is a speedy bunch, and capable of showing some classy football. Captain Neville has a good team under him and much is expected of it before the curtain is drawn for the season.

Last year, with a team not much heavier than the one that represents the school now, it defeated the then heralded Everett High eleven. The rooters for Malden expect the same trick to be pulled off this year. But few are predicting now because much will happen between now and Thanksgiving Day.

In Hurley, Jeffries, Fitzpatrick and Norton, Malden has one of the best backfields in the scholastic ranks. They work together like a well-oiled machine and make an interference that is hard to get through. The Neville brothers make two formidable tackles and their work this season has been a feature.

Lowell High has no stinch of a team this Fall. In fact it has an eleven worthy of mention. Not so good, perhaps, as teams that have been sent out from the school in past years, yet able to give a fine account of itself.

Having received a 6 to 0 defeat at the hands of Rindge, Lowell is coming down to take its revenge out of Malden's scalp. It promises to be a merry battle.

Another good game carded for today is the battle between Boston Latin and St. Mark's at Southboro. St. Mark's, fresh from its victory over Middlesex and Exeter, combined with the fact that with the idea of winning, Latin School is a speedy combination and although they got away to a bad start, they have been going good of late and are supremely confident of taking St. Mark's measure.

Norwood and Abington High Schools have a contest scheduled for today, Abington should win, judging from the showing already made. It is one of the best elevens the school has ever had and is leading for the Southeastern Massachusetts championship.

Rush Line Shifts Planned for Yale

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 28.—The Yale coaching staff will be augmented today by Carl Flanders and Ralph Bloomer. Rush line shifts planned by the coaches did not work at the return, but were injected into the sub lineup. Mike Madden went to tackle, after trials at both half back and guard, where he played Saturday. He is manifestly too light for guard, but did well for a novice at tackle. Stillman was tried at end, although his three years' previous experience has been at tackle. Pumpelly was promoted to the varsity, but is not likely to crowd out Wilson, whose line-backing and defensive play have been phenomenal. Caldwell, who played centre Saturday, has been moved out to guard.

Australian Cyclists Here for 6-Day Race

The Australian delegation of bicycle riders who will compete in the opening night events at the Arena next Saturday and in the six-day race which begins next Monday have arrived in town in order to complete training for what promises to be the banner event in Boston cycle racing. Arnold Clarke, second only to Kramer as a sprinter and among the best of the youngsters, heads the delegation. Clarke is teamed with Paddy O'Sullivan Hehir in the six-day race.

BAN JOHNSON ISSUES CALL FOR MEETING

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Formal notice of the annual fall meeting of the American League at the Auditorium, Chicago, on November 6, has been sent to the various club owners by President Ban Johnson. What will happen? The board of directors will go through the motions of "awarding the pennant" to the Athletics according to the "official standing of the clubs" and then after its "whirlwind" recital tory in the world's series has been recorded in the minutes, Connie Mack and Ben Shibe will pay for a banquet.

The most important matters to be considered, it is believed, are the demands of the Players' Fraternity and reforms in connection with the world's series in future. As usual the American League men will vote unanimously to place these matters in the hands of Big Ban for final adjustment. There will be no scandal, no wrangling, no jealousy and no peanut politics, because the club owners are broad minded enough to allow John son to run the circus.

The meeting may last two days, but no longer. It is to be held a month earlier than usual in order to avoid President C. A. Comiskey of the White Sox to take the trip around the world. It was Johnson's plan originally to go along with the old Roman, but in view of the present condition of the floating capital of the Federal League, the fraternity's demands and the trouble in the National League over President Lynch's re-election—Big Ban recently decided to remain on American soil.

Nap Hurlers to Go to Carr's School

CLEVELAND, Oct. 28.—Although no official announcement of the plans has been made, the Cleveland team experts to train at San Antonio, Tex., next Spring. In fact, it is understood Negotiations are under way whereby the Naps will practice upon the grounds controlled by Charley Cupp's baseball school. It is planned also that all the future Nap pitchers, including those under contract to Waterbury, Toledo and New Orleans, will be sent to Carr for instructions about the time of February 15. Besides Doak Bush, Carr has added Lou Criger to his list of instructors and others will follow shortly. Jack Coffey will specialize with young battery men.

"Davis Cup" for Golf New Idea

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Leading golf enthusiasts in England have begun an agitation for an international golfing competition with America and other countries where the game thrives, to be conducted along the general lines of the Davis cup tennis play. The frequent visits of Americans here and the less frequent trips of British golfers to America have given rise to the idea. At present there is no regular international golf event. One prominent English club is willing to offer a challenge cup if the scheme is started, and the players across the water would enter the lists with sufficient enthusiasm.

Pepe Sold to Missoula.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 28.—Joe Pepe, counted the best shortstop in the Eastern Association and drafted last month by the Chicago White Sox, has been settled that the Chicago club had sold him to the Missoula, Mont., team.

Stiff Drill Opens Work in Stadium

Crimson Coaches Warn Men About Illegal Use of Hands and Penalties Suffered as the Result

By SYDE LYNES.

HARVARD starts the hard work of the week behind closed doors in the Stadium today with a fairly stiff scrimmage against the second eleven which is being put in trim for the scrimmage, with practically every man on the team in first-class shape. There were a number of bumps and bruises of very minor order received in the game with Penn State, but with the exception of Middendorf and Elken there is not a man who could not be run into a game if there were need of it. Taking all precautions of knocking wood and also knuckling it and whistling in good style, we may say it is seldom Harvard finds its team in such good condition at this stage of the game. This excellent condition makes it so much easier for the coaches to smooth the eleven off for the big game with Princeton, which is now but ten days away.

The work this afternoon in the way of scrimmaging is pretty hard, but the worst of the gruelling drive of the season is over and from this time on the drilling of the eleven will be mainly keeping the men in good condition, teaching them some new formations and smoothing off the rough edges that keep cropping out and might run jerseys and other football gear, to say nothing of Harvard's chances, if not dealt with.

BLACKBOARD TALKS VALUABLE

ELKEN has an injured knee, which seems to be pretty serious, while a broken bone in Middendorf's left foot will doubtless keep him out of the game for the rest of the year. If Curtis has a slightly strained ligament in one of his limbs, note the deficiency of our phraseology, but will be all O. K. in a couple of days. The rest of the men are fine.

Head Coach Haughton is putting the chalk factories on a paying basis nowadays with his lengthy blackboard talks, but the notable improvement each week in the playing of the team as far as technique is concerned is largely the effect of this blackboard work, which usually takes up an hour of the eleven's time prior to the gruelling work in the confines of the Stadium.

TOO MANY PENALTIES.

THE coaches evidently look to scant the lessy penalties levied against their charges in the Penn State game, and for a long time during the week they had the Rinehart in hand and showed them how to use the hands without doing so illegally. Not only this year, but for many years, Harvard has proven itself one of the worst offenders in penalties in the stadium. The Crimson always pulled four or five good school lessons and frequently these penalties came when it may mean the loss of an opportunity to score. Twice last Saturday the Crimson was stopped out of striking distance by the method and it is hoped the switch was applied to Harvard lines-men to bring them to a fuller realization of their responsibilities along these lines. If one team can be coached not to offend, another certainly can, and continued infractions of the rules are not inexcusable, but a reflection on the intelligence of the players.

SAM'S BROTHER COMING PAST.

C. C. FELTON, a brother of the famous "Sam" of the Alpha Tau, has been spotted as varsity material by the Harvard coaches and has been summarily yanked up to the varsity squad. He is an end by instinct and training and will be utilized in this position by Coach Lee, the trainer of the Harvard lines that guard the end territory. Felton is somewhat of a kicker, not quite as good as his brother but fair, and he may be given a chance to show his merit in booting the pigskin.

D. P. MORGAN IS BACKFIELD.

D. P. MORGAN, the young husky who recently came out for football, is being tried out in the backfield and looks pretty good. He is fast and certainly has the weight to make a smashing fullback. Bradlee was also back in the game and at half-back. It begins to look as though the coaches would let the race for the general's position lie between Logan and Freedley.

STORER TO STICK AT END.

THERE is every reason to believe that Storer will be kept at end for the rest of the year, for Gilman's performance at tackle against Penn State was everything that could be be desired under the conditions. He will be given all the coaching possible from this time on, and the coaches look to him to put up a very strong game and justify their choice.

THE PROBABLE REGULAR LINEUP.

OH! POOR JEAN.

Apropos of the game against Penn State, there was some stew in the locker building over the gathering that came out of the game. Need we say that they were muddy? Anyhow Jean, the caretaker of the clothes lockers, etc., and his assistants spent all Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night in a frantic endeavor to cleanse those same things, and every once in a while one of the cleansers got lost in the mud. There were no fatalities and the clothes are again quite clean, but there is every possibility of the fashion department of sewers getting after Jean for transferring the greater part of the gridiron in the Stadium into Boston drains. At that, most of the men had to get complete uniforms and were all spick and span when they came onto the field yesterday. Every time a rainy day comes along Tom O'Toole, the presider of the rubs for the men, rubs his hands in unholy glee, and after Saturday his palms are quite raw.

Waltham and Malden to Clash Saturday

A game that will prove a big attraction has been arranged between Waltham High and Malden High to be played at Waltham on Saturday. This game came as a result of cancellations by the teams that were billed to meet Milton and Malden.

This is the first time that these teams have met on the gridiron and a hard game is anticipated. Waltham was scheduled to meet Milford High, while Malden had a game booked with Worcester Classical.

Federal League Puts Team in Baltimore

BALTIMORE, Oct. 28.—A company has been incorporated here to organize a baseball club to represent this city in the Federal League. A franchise has been acquired and an option secured on grounds near those of the International League club. The enterprise has the backing of a number of prominent Baltimore business men.

Schoolboy Sport Notes

THAT WAS SOME BATTLE between Captain Ignico of English High and Captain Wehner of Everett. Both played a sizzling game, fighting every minute of the time.

* * *

JACK TREMBELL OF ENGLISH High is doing fine work at the pivot position. Although a new man his work resembles that of a veteran.

* * *

* * *

CARY AND MOULTON, THE ends on the fast Wellesley High eleven are a great combination. They get down under kicks fast and tackle hard.

* * *

"BUNK" LALLY OF MECHANIC Arts was dropped for failure to report for practice. Discipline is one of the essentials of the game and it must be enforced.

* * *

ELIOTT, TACKLE, AND BOULton, guard, are showing up well on the line for Mechanic Arts. Both are big men and a tower of strength to the team.

* * *

J. TWITCHELL IS BACK IN Dorchester High lineup. He should give new strength to the backfield.

* * *

WELLESLEY WANTED TO ARrange a game with Waltham at the first of the season, but the two teams could not come to an understanding. This would be a fine contest, as both are speedy and depend a great deal on open play and fast work.

* * *

THAT KICK OF EDDIE KING'S in the Massachusetts "Aggie" punting contest was some drive. He booted the ball for fifty-four yards. He was a member of the High School of Commerce eleven last Fall.

* * *

* * *

CAPTAIN MOSHER OF THE Medford High has been playing a sterling game this season. Even when his team took a slump he fought just as hard for a victory. This late brace of the team is greatly due to his work.

* * *

WARD IS PUTTING UP AN EXcellent game at guard on Cambridge Latin. Sheehan of the same team is showing up well at tackle.

* * *

JOE GARDINER OF NEWTON High is living up to his reputation. He certainly can make a hole for his backs.

* * *

SALEM HIGH IS STILL ON the warpath for an game with Haverhill. Teacher-Manager Sullivan would like to hear from Haverhill.

THE MONEY GRABBERS.

"What is the public yawning for" said Files on Parade.

"The baseball games the baseball games," the Color Sergeant said.

"Why does the public look so bored?" said Files on Parade.

"The barnstorm trips, the barnstorm trips," the Color Sergeant said.

For they're still insist on playing though the schedule now is o'er,
Though the days are growing shorter and the Winter blizzards roar,
And it makes a fellow weary if he sees a baseball score
When he opens up the paper in the morning.

It is estimated that when Charlie Comiskey has returned from the world tour he will be able to say, "Let's have another," in fourteen languages.

The lot of the baseball scribe is not a supremely happy one, but what if he had to make out a box score in Japanese?

Boxing promoters in Wisconsin are losing so much money that they may find it necessary to quit the game and earn an honest living.

Commy refuses to cancel the world tour, demonstrating that he is a game guy and a glutton for punishment.

Cy Falkenberg is said to be one of the best bowlers in baseball. So is Larry McLean, but not that kind.

It is said that Bill Dahlen is not worried about losing his job in Brooklyn, but why worry about losing a job in Brooklyn?

The rumor that Frank Baker has decided to quit baseball shows how scarce news is at this writing.

Morris Rath has been hitting the ball hard on the world tour, but he has not been batting against American League pitching.

Jacques Fournier threatens to become a wrestler. And we always looked upon him as an honest youth!

Colonel Hedges says he has signed Branch Rickey to manage the Browns for ten years. And he it said, to the shame of the U. S. A, there is no legal way to make him expiate the crime.

The California Dip.

Start some good turkey trot on the piano or phonograph, or whatever you have handy. Then get up on the floor and try the steps. You have no idea how very soon the written description of the steps will fit in with the movement of your feet. Music has power for almost anything, you know. Then when you think you know the steps, practice them, each movement separately, and then fit the different movements together.

NOTHING COMPLICATED

THE first movement of the [illegible] begins with a skipping step. It comes after the fish walk movement, and is simply an ordinary skip done four times in the regular trot position for dancing.

On the fifth count comes what is known as the California Dip, with the man's right knee and the girl's right knee touching the floor. This dip is held for two counts of the music. [illegible] the dip of the eight counts is made with two regular turkey trot sways.

It can readily be seen that this third movement requires no practice at all, and the California Dip is done precisely the same as any dip introduced in any of the fancy movements of today. It may be a little lower than some, but the only practice required is to learn to do it so perfectly that it appears easy and graceful.

I dount know that I remember about William, sed Pa, but I suppose he will be about the same as the average relative that cums to see you. The only good thing that I can say about my relatives, Pa sed, is that they keep away & the mear distant they keep away the mear distant they stay. That is the kind of relatives to have.

I am sure you will like William, sed Ma. He is getting a little old & he likes to talk about himself a little, but he has a kind hart, & besides he is quite well fixed & maybe he will leave all his money to Bobbie if he talks a fancy to him.

I dount want his munny, I sed. My pig bank is nearly full.

Thats fine, Bobbie, sed Pa, be independent. Well, I hoop I shall like William, but if I do my dope will be upset, sed Pa.

Just as Pa was speeking Mister Wilson calm in. He had side whiskers & he was a grate big man around his waist. He wasent very tall, but he was fat enuff for four men. His voice calm from away down in his stummick, & he rolled his eyes won he talked like a fish wen it is caught on a hook.

Miserabul climate you have down East, he sed the minnit he got in the big chair with Pa gave him. I cuddent endure it here long.

It is very hard on fleshy people, sed Pa. It is dangerous to remain in this climate long if you way around three hundred pounds.

I was not always fleshy, sed William Wilson. When I was a yung men I was but like a poather, and I was as supple as a strip of whalebone. I cud not be equalled fizzically by any man in my section, he sed. I cud jump farther & higher, run faster, skate better, ate harder, swim eesier & do more work than any man or boy I knew. I was the best littel man that walked the roads in them days, sed William Wilson.

Indeed, sed Pa. Isent it too bad that a grate athlete has to grow old & fat?

I was a good deel like what you may be was yung, sed Pa. I cud brag moar, He faced & do less than anybody in my cownty.

But William Wilson dident pay any attenshun to wat Pa wus saying. He was rolling his eyes & thinking about the days won he was yung. In them da, he went on to tell us, I was the cheef of the La Crosse fire department. Never regard a fire so fierce that I cuddent overcum it with my men, he sed. & such brain, devoted men they were, he sed. They used to cell me Bill Wilson, the Fire King, & they wud follow me to the brink of any exsm. They wud die for me if I lifted up my hand. Billy Wilson, the Fire King, was what they called me, sed Ma's relashun.

I was on the Fire Department for a yeer onst, sed Pa. They only had two fires that yeer & I was out of town both times, so I dount know a grate deel about being the Fames, but I wud have did my best.

I always loved danger, sed William Wilson. It was the same way in the Civil War. I was a boy of fourteen then, but I saved the regimental flag so many times that they got it for me for a souvenier at the end of the war. I shall never fergit the day that General Thomas calm to see me. The old Rock of Chickamaugy looked me in the eye & sed, Billy Wilson, you are the bravest man I ever saw in action.

That is the way Mister Wilson talked with Ma & Pa showed him ware his room was. Jest as he was going to shut the door & go to bed he sed, is it true that there are a lot of burglars in Boston?

Flower vases with long necks can be cleaned by filling them with hot water and small pieces of newspaper. Shake vigorously, and you will find that the paper will remove all the dust and sediment from the inside.

When boiling a pudding, place a piece of grease-proof paper under the pudding and the cloth. This will prevent the goodness boiling out of the pudding, and save labor when washing the cloth.

Sometimes boot polish becomes quite dry with keeping. Moisten it with a little turpentine. It softens the polish, making it usable at once, and also gives a good gloss to the leather.

Smiling and Whistling Is Carroll McComas's Secret

I feel m smile down to my finger tips

Cheerful wrinkles never hurt

Whistling prevents a double chin

By MAUDE MILLER

PERHAPS you don't know that the old age wrinkles that come from smiling are much different from all other wrinkles. I think this is a real beauty secret, don't you? And it is such a good secret that Miss Carroll McComas, the pretty actress, wants to share it with all of you.

If you had been in my place you would have felt rather helpless before this lady of many talents, for Miss McComas can dance divinely, sing adorably, whistle like a veritable mocking bird and smile more attractively than all of these put together. And now you will all say that she must be well-nigh perfect. "he is. And she is going to talk to you now about her greatest attraction, and she wrinkled up her pretty face in her nose to be forgotten smile when I told her that I wanted

"O, yes, I have an unfailing suggestion that will rival any beauty doctor in the world," she said, "it is truly wonderful—just smile. I used to think about my smiles, but now I just smile and let the rest take care of itself, for I am perfectly conscious of the fact that people who laugh a lot can never be lonely. Our friends never notice it if we are, there are too busy being amused at our smiling countenances.

"I always wrinkle up my eyes when I laugh; it brings dimples into play in the most unexpected places. Yes, wrinkles, too, I know, but wrinkles that come from cheerfulness never hurt. They are only dimples deepened a trifle, not the dreadful creases that come from unhappiness and tears. I wrinkle up my nose, too, when I laugh; it adds to the general effect. I feel my smile down to my finger-tips, and even down to my feet. When I smile I really give my whole self up to it, and I believe in smiling freely. I like to have people know me by my smile, because I try to have it reflect my true appreciation of everything there is to smile at in this dear funny old world. I believe in smiling about our failures as well as our successes, too. I was it that said so aptly, 'if we smile about a trouble it's a bubble blown away?' Oh, it takes grit to laugh when we are down. I know it, but does it do any good to cry? And it is such a comfortable feeling to know that we are being beautiful all the time. That is a compensation that atones for any headache.

"Perhaps it would not be too strange to add a word right here about whistling. To any one who wants a pretty mouth this suggestion will be invaluable. Some girls can't whistle, but every one knows how to go about it, and whistling results in four distinct beauty rules. You hardly believe that possible, do you, but I can prove to you that it is so. First of all, it inflates and therefore develops the lungs with each deep breath that is taken. Every one knows how very important a good breathing apparatus is to any beauty devotee. Then second, whistling keeps the muscles around the mouth firm, preventing the sagging of approaching age. third, it prevents all possibility of a double chin; and fourth, it imparts to the mouth a tender, curving expression. This last many would rather frickles in the face of others, but I think it will appeal to most girls of today!

"Some day whistling is going to play a larger part in society than it does now, it does just at present, but until it does practice it whenever you can, and master the art from its delightful origin in the realm of song. Smiling brings to us all a constant source of happiness and whistling adds to it the power to express both and interesting old age."

THE KING OF DIAMONDS

BY LOUIS TRACY

A THRILLING STORY OF A MODERN MONTE CRISTO

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1904, by Edward J. Clode

"BEG pawdon, sir; I'm sure, but I wouldn't ha' minded if it wasn't my own old keb. Didn't you spot it?"

"You don't tell me so. How odd!"

"And to think of a brewer's drayman like that gettin' 'old of it. Well—"

Philip, leaning back to laugh, for Wale's vocabulary was amusing, if not fit for publication, suddenly realized the queer trick that even the events in the life of an individual have of repenting themselves.

In one day, after an interval of many years, he had been suddenly confronted by personages connected with the period of his sufferings, with the very garments he wore at that time, with the cab in which he drove from Cierkenwell to Hatton Garden. Abingdon had dined with him; Isaacstein had sent him a message; his driver, even, was the cabman who made him a present of two shillings, a most fortunate transaction for Wale, as it led to his selection to look after Philip's London stable.

All who had befriended the forlorn boy in those early days had benefited to an extraordinary degree. The coffee stall keeper grew gave him coffee grounds and crusts, the old clothes man who cut down the price of his first outfit, Mrs. Wrigley, going hopelessly in her toil in a Shepherd's Bush laundry; Mr. Wilson, of Grunt & Sons, the kindly jeweler of Lodgate Hill, were each sought out, and either placed in a good business or bounteously rewarded for the services they had rendered. O'Brien, of course, was found a sinecure office at the Mary Anson Home.

As for the doctor, he owed his Harley street practice to the millionaire's help and patronage.

It is worthy of note that Philip never wore a watch other than that presented to him by the police of the Whitechapel Division.

It was an ordinary English silver lever, and he carried it attached to a knotted boutlace.

Did he but know how far the historical parallel had gone that day—how Jockey Mason had waited for hours outside his residence in the hope of seeing him and becoming acquainted with his appearance—he might have been surprised, but he would never have guessed the evil that this man would accomplish, and, in some measure, accomplish unconsciously.

He was not in his club five minutes when a friend tackled him for a concert subscription.

"Anson, you are fond of music. Here is a new violinist, a Hungarian, who wants a start. I heard him in Budapest last Autumn. He is a good chap. Take some stalls."

Philip glanced at the program.

"Eckstein at the piano. I see! He must be a star. Who is the soprano? I have never heard her name before."

"Miss Evelyn Atherley," read his friend over his shoulder. "I don't know her myself. Dine with me here tomorrow night. We will go and hear the performance afterward."

"Can you distribute stalls among your acquaintances?"

"My dear fellow, I will be delighted. Sorry I can't help Jowkacsy a bit myself."

"You are helping him very well. I will take a dozen; two for you and me; ten elsewhere, for the claqueurs."

"You are a good chap. Hello! There's Jones. Jones is good for a couple. Don't forget tomorrow night."

And the good-natured enthusiast, who was a terror to many of his friends, ran off to secure another victim.

Philip had sent his hansom home. Shortly before eleven he quitted the club, intending to walk to Park Lane by a circuitous route, long enough to consume a big cigar.

He chanced to pass the hall in which the concert was to take place. A few people were hurrying from the stage door. Evidently a rehearsal had just taken place. A short man, with a huge cluster of flowing locks, that offered abundant proof of his musical genius, ran out with a violin case in his hand.

He was about to enter a hansom waiting near the curb, but the driver said:

"Engaged, sir."

The man did not seem to understand, so the cabby barred his way with the whip and shook his head. Then the stranger rushed to a neighboring cab rank—evidently an excitable gentleman, with the high-strung temperament of art.

A lady quitted the hall a few seconds later.

"Are you engaged?" Philip heard her ask the cabman.

"No, miss."

"Take me to No. 44 Maida Crescent, Regent's Park," she said. After arranging her cloak daintily she entered the vehicle.

"That is odd," thought Philip, who had witnessed both incidents in the course of a six yards' walk. He glanced at the cabman, and fancied the man gave a peculiar look of intelligence toward a couple of fashionably dressed loungers who stood in the shadow of the closed public entrance.

The two men, without exchanging a word to Philip's hearing, went to a brougham standing at some little distance. They entered. The coachman, who received no instructions, drove off in the same direction as the hansom, and, as if to make sure he was being followed, the cab driver turned to look behind him.

Once, in Naples, Philip saw a man stealthily following a woman down an unlighted alley. Without a moment's hesitation he went after the pair, and was just in time to prevent the would-be assassin from plunging a stiletto into the woman's back. The recollection of that little drama flashed into his mind now; there was a suggestion of the Neapolitan bravo's air in the manner in which these men stalked a girl who was quite unaware of their movements.

He asked himself why a cabman should refuse one fare and pick up another in the same spot. The affair was certainly odd. He would see further into it before he dismissed it from his thoughts. The distance to Maida Crescent was not great.

While thinking he was walking. He sprang into the nearest hansom.

"A hansom is following a hansom up Langham place," he said to the driver. "Keep behind them. If they separate, follow the brougham. When it stops, pull up at the best place to avoid notice."

The man nodded. Nothing surprises a London cabman. Soon the three vehicles were spinning along the Outer Circle.

It was not a very dark night, the sky being cloudless and starlit. Away in front, at a point where the two lines of lamps curved sharply to the right and vanished amidst the trees, a row of little, red lights showed that the road was up.

The leading hansom drove steadily on. There was nothing remarkable in this. When the driver reached the obstruction he would turn out of the park by the nearer gate—that was all.

But he did nothing of the kind. There was a sudden crash of wood, a woman's scream, and the horse was struggling wildly amidst a pile of loose wooden blocks, while one wheel of the cab dropped heavily into a shallow trench.

Simultaneously the brougham pulled up and its two occupants rushed to the scene of the accident.

Philip's driver, of course, obeyed instructions, but he shouted to his fare as he jumped into the road:

"That feller's either drunk or 'e did it a-purpuss."

Philip was of the same opinion. He recalled the overthrown barricade almost as soon as the two hurrying men in front, both of whom were in evening dress.

One of them held the horse's head and steadied him; the other was just in time to help the young lady to leave her dangerous conveyance.

"I hope you have received no injury, madam," he said, politely.

"No, not at all. I was frightened for an instant. How could it have happened? I saw the lamps quite plainly. The man seemed to pull his horse deliberately into the barrier."

The voice was singularly sweet and well modulated. A neighboring gaslamp illuminated the girl's face with its white, unpitying radiance. It revealed features beautifully modeled, and large, startled eyes that looked wonderingly from the man who came so promptly to the rescue to the driver who had caused the mishap. Philip, behind the hansom, was unseen. He remained a critical observer.

"I fear he is intoxicated," was the reply. "Here, you! How came you to make such a blunder?"

"Blind as an owl," came the gurgling answer. "I saw some red spots dancing afore me, but I thort it must be that last glass o' beer."

Nevertheless the cabman extricated his horse and vehicle from their predicament with singular ease for a half-drunken man.

"No, no," cried the lady. "I will walk. I will pay you now."

"Take my advice and pay him not a cent," protested the man by her side. "Leave him to me. My friend here will take his number. If you will accept a seat in my brougham——"

The cabman began to swear and threaten them all with personal violence. The lady, unwilling to avail herself of the accommodating offer made to her, tried to edge away. The driver of the hansom whipped his horse on to the pavement. By this time he had turned his back to the road-menders' barrier.

The girl, angered and alarmed, shrank toward the gentleman, who seemed to give her some measure of protection from the infuriated cause of all the trouble.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ASK HIM TO CALL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A few years ago I met a young man and kept company with him until about five months ago. I would like to have him for a friend again, not only because I like him, but also because I want to help him and have had a great deal of influence over him. While he was keeping company with me he quit the use of tobacco, but now he is using it to the fullest extension. I can see that his health is failing from it every day, and I want to help him out of the habit. Will you please tell me how I can gain his friendship without showing him that I am too anxious?

E. J. H.

GET him to call some evening and tell him frankly that you are interested in his health and wellbeing as one good friend is in another, and urge him to give up the tobacco habit.

Then, if he refuses, abandon it and him from your mind. He is a man grown, but is a weak sort of creature if he can't take care of himself.

THAT IS POSSIBLE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young man for the past eight months and his parents object. Do you think that if he dared for me to call home to his parents that I would have any?

S. E. N.

I DO not know the age or circumstances of the young man who objects to your company, but it is possible that if he is very young and you are some years his senior, if he is dependent on his parents, if they doubt your motives, love and many other reasons would lead them to do as it is said was to Dagi their sons.

TAKE THE ONE YOU LOVE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with two young men and both have asked for my hand in marriage. I like very near equally, but I like the other one more than I like the one I am engaged to.

Would you advise me as to what I am to do?

PERPLEXED.

IF you know the name of one you would not describe a humane.

Take the one you like the most, my dear, and don't hesitate. Love and sympathy are more than a match for gold, and poverty is better than a surrender of wealth without love.

Same.

Beatrice Fairfax On

The Girl Who Is Tired of Waiting

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

Would a gentleman keep up friendship with a young lady for several years, if he wasn't serious?

A young man has been calling on me for five years as a friend, and though he acts as though he loves me, has never said anything about keeping steady company. Should I give him up as I have learned to love him?

WELL now, my dear, it depends so much upon the "gentleman" in the case—doesn't it?

Seriously—what do you mean by serious? Seriously to love with you?

Is it really possible that a girl can be acquainted with a man for five years and well acquainted with him, and not know whether he's in love with her or not?

He acts as though he loved you—you say. What do you mean by that?

Are you one of the sort of girls who thinks a man is dead in love with her if he asks her to go to the theatre once in a while or sends her a box or candy whenever he happens to think of it?

No, my dear, I don't believe he's in love with you, or by this time there wouldn't be anything very much to and may-be-not-ish about the affair at all.

HOW CAN YOU?

Give him up? How can you give him up when you haven't got him—apparently? Why don't you find out right down on the fact of your very good friendship for him when he calls—be sweet to him when you see him—but every once in a while, on an evening when you expect him—be called out on another engagement.

Don't pretend you're called out—really go—you must have some friends somewhere that you can go to.

Choose this particular young man's particular evening to go visiting.

Meet some other people—look around you and get other men look like—he may not be such a prince of the world, after all.

There are others, you know, even if he is.

He must be a very selfish, self-centred sort of young man, to say the least—either that or he's dead in love with some other girl and thinks you know it, and just spends his evenings with you for a pastime.

When you can't get chocolate creams molasses candy will sometimes do for a substitute. But you are the safest route in this case.

What does he think you are going to do—sit in the corner with your hands neatly folded and wait for him to throw the handkerchief, as they used to do in the old-fashioned games?

Learned to love him—how just exactly what do you mean by that?

Do you mean that you've learned to get used to him, and that you've made yourself believe that you are in love with him because he's around so much that nobody else gets a chance to be around at all?

JUST FOR A CHANGE

What has been learned can be unlearned. Unlearn being in love with such a stupid fellow. The way to do that is to think about something else a few minutes, just for a change.

If he's as selfish as this now, when you are a young girl and he isn't sure of you, what would he be if he should get married to you?

The world isn't going to stop going round for you just because you're not at home on the evenings he calls.

Stay away a few times and give him something to wonder about—it's good for a man to wonder a little bit once in a while and in the meantime you stop wondering yourself, and begin to think.

Wanted Evidence

An attorney was addressing a jury on behalf of a prisoner.

"Gentlemen," he said, "witnesses have sworn that they saw the accused shoot the girl. They have sworn they saw the flash and heard the report; they have sworn they saw Pete Jackson fall flat, they have sworn that the bullet was extracted from Pete Jackson's body; but, gentlemen in the name of justice, I ask you, where is the evidence that the bullet hit Pete Jackson?"

A Happy Bald Headed Man

Well-Known Politician, Nearly Bald, Now Has Heavy Growth of Hair.

Tells How He Did It.

A western politician, well known on account of his baldness and ready wit, surprised his friends by appearing with a heavy growth of hair; many of his old friends did not know him and others thought he had a wig. On being asked how he did it, he made the following statement: "I attribute the remarkable growth of my hair to the use of the following simple recipe which any lady or gentleman can mix at home: To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and 1 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. It not only promotes the growth of the hair but removes dandruff, scalp humors and prevents the hair from falling out. It darkens streaked, faded gray hair and makes the hair soft and glossy. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at a very little cost and mixed at home."—Adv.

MELLEN DEFENDS ACTS IN AMAZING INTERVIEW

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven Railroad, says in amazing interview here today:

This man, whom some called "The Sphinx of Railroading," talked with unusual freedom, not of his acts, but of his own famous reticence in the years he was administrator of the road's affairs.

"I like the good opinion of people. It is not pleasant to be held up daily to contempt and contempt," he said. "I would rather be the New Haven boys on a gold platter."

He said he had expected to live within a year "confirming legislation for his acts, from Washington, and referred to the "confirming legislation" that he secured from the Governor and Legislature in Massachusetts.

"I read editors or wants to see in some of $100 a month," he continued, following the wish that "it were over."

"I mean," he explained, "that for another twelve months I shall be blamed for all the misfortunes of the road. Then there is the indictment for the week last December. I would give all my world's goods to have that off my head."

Confesses Sharp Tongue.

"Tell me," he said to a reporter, "why have the newspapers so delighted to vilify me? Why have they made me out a monster?" he began.

"Perhaps," came the reply, "because so few people know you personally. Also, there is a momentum to such things. They get started and run their course. You had always made perfect impressible. Nobody knew Charles S. Mellen as a human being. He represented a monopoly."

"I have had a sharp tongue," said Mr. Mellen, evidently thinking of some of his work, for he smiled grimly. "I have lamented some people.

"They know it.

"I don't mind rough handling," he said. "I rather enjoy it. If it's a go and take. Now there was Prouty. Everybody who was at the Interstate Commerce Commission a hearing last Summer in Boston, where Prouty presided, felt that he was biased. I didn't mind that a bit. It was coming to me. I had given it to Prouty.

"I booked up his record once. I found where he had been prosecuting people to make complaints against the New Haven long ago, and had then himself cried the complaints. I put all of that in a speech I delivered at the Art Museum in Boston. I made Prouty hot. I've been told that I had he would get even with me. That was his chance in Boston last Summer. He took his turn. I expected it.

Wants Good Will.

"Or, take Brandeis. I have no personal feeling against him. In fact, I admire the work he has done—for his client.

"That is all right. What I can't understand is the campaign of vilification engaged in by people at whose hands I deserved nothing. I like the good opinion of people. It is not pleasant to be held up daily to contempt and contumely.

"First of all, I would like to see those my associates, and of the men who work for me. I have that. The telegraphers of the Boston & Maine have accepted me. That pleases me. It shows that I have done something. But, with the public it has been different. I have been very unpopular with the public. I wonder why. I was not an unpopular president of the Northern Pacific.

"People had long hated the New Haven Railroad, said Mr. Mellen. Long before I took charge of it they hated it. For one good thing it was raised up too much with politics in the old days. On that account it had many enemies when I took it. It was not to blame for those things, and in that way deprived groups of men of their perquisites and prerogatives. They became enemies.

"Thirdly, there is a natural dislike among men for a monopoly. Personally, that is, until they come to see that in order to reach its highest development a monopoly must be extremely moral and should and will be what is called a monopoly. There cannot be in fact a railroad monopoly, as a transportation system nowadays is regulated both as to rates and service.

An Economic Crime.

"That has seemed to some people to be the strongest moral defence in your case—the fact that you believed in what you did," was remarked.

"It was the only way to develop a transportation machine to its highest point of efficiency," said Mr. Mellen. "I would do it to do over again. I would do it in the same lines. What is more though I would not take the New Haven back if it were offered to me on a gold platter, if I were in charge of it tomorrow again I would begin right where I left off. And I would have no use for a monopoly."

"I have had a sharp tongue," said Mr. Mellen, evidently thinking of some of his work, for he smiled grimly. "I have lamented some people.

"They know it.

"I don't mind rough handling," he said. "I rather enjoy it. If it's a go and take. Now there was Prouty. The Port Directors Have Brought the Ships to Boston—Now Put the Control of the Boston & Maine in New England Hands and Give Them Cargoes

At a luncheon given last week by the leading business men of Boston to Mr. Gabriel Guez of the Fabre Line and Mr. Jones of the American Transportation Company, under the auspices of the Port Directors of Boston, Mr. Joseph A. Conry, one of the Port Directors, made a very important and significant statement. He said:

The Port Directors HAVE BROUGHT THE SHIPS TO PORT. IT IS NOW A RAILROAD PROPOSITION TO SEE THAT THESE SHIPS GET OUTWARD CARGO. Some time ago the tariff men of the Port Directors made some studies of freight movement from eighteen cities and towns in Massachusetts all contributory to Boston. From this study we found that large shipments of freight running up into the thousands of tons, which could well be handled through the port of Boston, were DIVERTED TO NEW YORK.

The two export roads upon which Boston depends are the Boston & Maine and the Boston & Albany and by a curious fatality neither one is an independent line—the Boston & Albany being controlled by the New York Central and the Boston & Maine by the New Haven. Regardless of where the control may be centred these roads COLLECT A VAST INCOME FROM NEW ENGLAND and they SHOULD BE WILLING to exert every pound of energy in developing the port of Boston.

In this statement, Mr. Conry makes a powerful indictment against the present railroad monopoly. Common experience would lead us all to expect that those who control from New York the New England railroads, would be caught diverting freight from Boston to New York. In this case the New Haven Railroad diverts the freight to New York in order to get the longest possible haul AT THE EXPENSE OF THIS COMMUNITY.

As Interstate Commerce Commissioner Prouty said in the last report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, Massachusetts sold her birthright when she consented to the lease which gave the Boston & Albany to the New York Central. And we passed ENTIRELY under the yoke when we allowed the New Haven to take over the Boston & Maine.

There is just one way to insure New England interests. It is the way which Lieutenant-Governor Walsh and Governor Foss both advocate. It is the course to which the Democratic party is committed by its platform. It is to do what the Boston AMERICAN has advocated for six years. IT IS TO SEPARATE THE BOSTON & MAINE FROM THE CONTROL OF THE NEW HAVEN RAILROAD; PUT IT IN NEW ENGLAND HANDS AND KEEP IT THERE.

THEN AND NOT UNTIL THEN WILL THE RAILROADS BE IN A POSITION TO ASK FOR PUBLIC CONFIDENCE. THEN AND NOT UNTIL THEN. WILL THERE BE PEACE IN THE NEW ENGLAND FIELD. THEN AND NOT TILL THEN WILL THE PORT OF BOSTON GET A FULL MEASURE OF TRADE.

The People of Maine ARE Interested in the Railroad Question

The New Haven Monopoly Will Throttle Business Alike in Maine and Massachusetts

The Interstate Commerce Commission is holding hearings on the petition of the Boston & Maine to be allowed to increase its rates. At this hearing business men and farmers from Northern New England are protesting.

The following is the testimony of Mr. B. L. Cummings, a farmer and fruit grower of West Paris, Maine:

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

If the Valley of Peace could be reached only by the path of Love, when the persevering traveller arrived he would find few inhabitants.

Life is not dated by years. On the calendar of living events are the periods.

Conceit is as natural to the masculine nature as a centre is to a circle.

* * *

Things are never so bad as they seem. The difficulty you fear will cower before you and sneak away if you will but dare to look it straight in the eye.

Don't say all you think—unless you are quite sure that you think all you say.

Some men swear all sorts of things by Heaven and Earth and by their own unshakable convictions. Heaven and Earth remain—but the men get a new set of convictions—That's all!

* * *

Nothing is so dead as a dead infatuation. And the more a man has been infatuated, the more he resents an attempt to galvanize the dull, dead thing into life.

When a love affair is over, make your faithless sweetheart a present of everything in the past—but be quite sure that you keep your future free for yourself—and the next sweetheart.

However, you loathe mathematics, it will pay to learn the simple rule of three: Two's company!

You'd better listen when opportunity knocks—otherwise you may find yourself knocking ever after.

Many a green isle needs must be
In the deep sea of misery.
Or the mariner, worn and wan,
Never thus could voyage on
Day and night and night and day,
Drifting on his weary way.

EDITORIALS AN AID TO STUDENTS

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir: I have been a reader of your admirable paper for a great many years and a most zealous admirer of the editorials and have called the attention of my students and acquaintances to the impartiality, fearlessness and genuine altruism as well as to the terse and telling style of all your readers. I have for some time wished to tender publicly my sincere acknowledgement and admiration, particularly with a view to opening those people's eyes to the difference between the real and bogeyless journalism embodied in the Hearst papers and the deplorable todyism pervading far too many other publications.

Permit me to add that it has become a practice in my school and will remain so to encourage all advanced students of the language of this country to improve their style and form or reform their mind by reading the editorials of the Boston AMERICAN. C. H.

PRAISE FOR SUNDAY EDITORIALS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Permit me to sound my humble praise for your very able editorial in last Sunday's issue of the AMERICAN. It stands out in bold relief by its excellence, carrying a sublime message to all who take the opportunity presented to them to draw a lesson from its symbols. I hope you may keep up your good work. The world needs your pen more than guns. I. D. P.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I want to thank you heartily for your helpful editorials in the Sunday AMERICAN. They certainly make one feel and think seriously.

Sneers at a City's Effort to Clean Up

By REV. C. F. AKED, D. D.

The following article by the Rev. Dr. Aked was written in San Francisco, but the closing of the notorious Barbary Coast and the results of the police order have become so nationally prominent as to make the writer's remarks of interest in every large city, for the principles involved are the same in all.

MR STITT WILSON'S address on the issues raised by the determination of the Police Commission to separate drinking from dancing in the Barbary Coast resorts is an unworthy and discreditable piece of business.

It is unworthy of Mr. Wilson. It is discreditable to the cause he represents. It is a bad specimen of the religion of sneer and snarl. It shows the Socialist at his worst, at his very worst, and it will do more to stiffen opposition to Socialism and to deepen a distrust of the Socialist spirit than a dozen volumes written with that object in view. A good cause is usually better than its best advocates, and Socialism may be immeasurably better than Mr. Stitt Wilson. But heaven save us from this man's spirit!

Gibbon's "Decline and Fall" has been described as "a sneer in three volumes." Mr. Wilson's speech is a sneer in three columns and rant in the remaining two. He sneers at everybody. The Mayor of San Francisco, and the editor of the Examiner, the president of the Police Commission, and the acting president of the University of California, the president of Leland Stanford, and the obscure writer of these lines—we are all Pharisees together. Real estate dealers are "pure and holy." Men who desire to see San Francisco prosperous are afflicted by spasms of acute hypocrisy. And the only decent persons in San Francisco are Mr. Stitt Wilson and the prostitutes.

* * *

A supreme offence in the eyes of Mr. Stitt Wilson is that we desire to see San Francisco prosperous. I, for one, plead guilty to the charge. I do. I should love to see San Francisco the most prosperous city in the world and all other cities making haste to catch up with the same prosperity. I see no virtue in poverty, squalor, failure and futility. I would rather a man have three good meals a day than one bad one. I would rather have him live in a house than a hovel. I would rather see him enjoy comfort than wallow in misery. I am satisfied that poverty, ignorance, dirt, stupidity and enforced idleness do the devil's work. And I am not satisfied when I see Mr. Stitt Wilson helping him. I would rather see profitable work looking for every honest man and woman that wants work, than famished hordes of miserable men and women parading the streets of the city with the banners of the I. W. W. floating over them, or bearing boards upon their aching breasts with the trucie formula, "We want work." I have seen processions of the unemployed—and, alas! the unemployable—in the lands beyond the seas, where Mr. Wilson has been them, too. And for the crime of desiring to see San Francisco prosperous I will gladly endure any punishment to which San Francisco chooses to sentence me.

* * *

And in Mr. Wilson's view this is a crime. If not, his sneers are as silly as they are savage, with their "pure and holy real estate dealers," their grinning "amen" and their hysterical climax: "Can we afford to allow the blessed Los Angeles to monopolize all civic whiteness? No! No! We, too, shall cleanse our ways. It pays!"

It does pay. And we cannot afford to fall behind any city on earth in morality and decency. And the suggestion that there is something base in taking into view the wasteful, destructive and suicidal results of profligacy is ineffably foolish.

Honesty is the best policy. A man who is only honest because honesty is the best policy may not be the noblest type of an honest man. But it is better for him and better for the world that he should be honest because honesty is the best policy than that he should be a thief. And only a fool thinks otherwise.

It does not pay a city to be dirty and vicious. And it is better for a city to be clean and virtuous for this reason than to keep on in dirty and vicious ways.

All of which I do not doubt Mr. Stitt Wilson knows as well as I do. Only, he set out to sneer. And he had to sneer. His advertised subject announced that he was going to sneer. "The Barbary Coast is a Barbarous Land; or, The Harlot and the Pharisee." He was in a sneering mood. But it has yet to be shown that sneering is a Christian grace, or that the world's work has been done by sneerers.

* * *

The worst of it all is that Mr. Stitt Wilson sees as clearly as anybody can—as clearly as the president of the Police Commission or the editor of the Examiner or the obscure preacher referred to or anybody else—the horrors of commercialized vice. And I add that he is as deeply, as sincerely, as passionately anxious to put an end to commercialized vice as any man or woman living on earth at the present time. And it is infinitely sad to find this rage against capitalism has blinded his eyes to one of the deadliest and bloodiest crimes of capital—the crime of making profit out of the bodies and souls of women.

Then why is not Mr. Stitt Wilson as one with us in our attempt to stop it on the Barbary Coast? Apparently because we are not all Socialists!

There are men and women who want to see the world made better. Only they want to see it made better by them and in their way. When other men and women take a hand in making it better, and in a way not exactly theirs, yet not antagonistic to theirs nor inconsistent with it, they sneer.

The People of Maine ARE Interested in the Railroad

Every advance in rates on the Boston & Maine affects us directly, and rates have been steadily increasing for years. It is seventeen cents on a barrel of apples for the 166 miles between West Paris and Boston, yet in New York State there is no rate, even up to 500 miles, that is more than sixteen cents.

Commissioner Prouty said:

If the rate were to be raised three cents would you be much worse off?

The witness replied:

A rise of rates would be a serious matter for our business. It becomes a very serious matter where there is such a small profit.

Mr. E. F. Holbrook, wholesale grocer, of Keene, N. H., said:

The question is, first, shall the company be allowed to increase rates, and second, how much shall the increase be. Mr. Campbell has testified that they need about $5,000,000 more yearly.

I believe that amount is absolutely exorbitant, and is largely on account of errors made by the previous management. As one of the large shippers I should certainly protest very strongly against an increase as great as that given on the proposed local class rate schedule.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce submitted figures showing that the proposed advance in rates on goods increased the cost of goods between Portland and Boston alone more than $14,000 one way. If you doubled this you have almost $30,000 on goods going only between two cities. This does not include goods shipped from Boston to any other point in Maine, or from Portland to any other city except Boston.

The increase on goods shipped to Manchester, N. H., would be nearly $41,000 one way. Doubling it both ways would make it more than $90,000 between Manchester and Boston.

Yet, Governor Haines of Maine recently declared that the people of Maine were not interested in the railroad question which is vexing New England! If the people of Maine and New Hampshire have not understood why the Boston AMERICAN and the intelligent people of Massachusetts have made this long and determined struggle against an oppressive railroad monopoly, this demand for an increase of rates may wake up Maine and New Hampshire.

The AMERICAN ought not to include New Hampshire among the States asleep. The people of New Hampshire have attacked the railroad problem with considerable vigor. It is hardly possible that Governor Haines represented the people of Maine when he declined to participate in the New England conference of Governors on the railroad situation.

The interests of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Rhode Island are identical on this railroad question. In competition with the rest of the country, our condition is alike. The fight which the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange and the business organizations and this newspaper have been making against our railroad monopoly has been a fight as much for Maine as it has been for Massachusetts.
